D. C. Budget Allows Funds For Potomac Tube Survey

Tunnel or Bridge To Alexandria and Anacostia Crossing Would Be Studied

The Commissioners yesterday disclosed their $51,750,000 budget now awaiting routine Budget Bureau approval includes funds for engineering studies relative to a bridge or tunnel across the Potomac River between Washington and Alexandria and an Anacostia River crossing between a point near South Capitol Street and the Naval Air Station tract.

Both crossings have received support from civic associations of Southeast Washington and of Representative Howard Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, who has sponsored a bill in Congress for creation of a commission to study such a project.

Specifically the Commissioners have included an item for $25,000 for preliminary surveys for a crossing of the Anacostia River. The city heads also seek authority to enter consultations with the public roads administration and Virginia authorities as to the Potomac crossing.

Although the Commissioners are said to be interested in both crossings they frankly admit they do not know how the financing would be arranged.

The Potomac River crossing, whether it be a bridge or a tunnel, would serve as a link in the proposed Washington-Baltimore highway now in the process of study. One suggestion calls for a crossing from a point in Alexandria to Shepherds Landing which juts into the river between Bellevue and Blue Plains. Traffic moving north from Virginia could be routed over this

Cold Wave Due Here Tonight

Sub-freezing temperatures were due in Washington tonight, and again tomorrow night, the Weather Bureau announced last night.

The frigid wave, which yesterday blanketed the country between the Appalachians and the Rockies, was reported last night slowly spreading to the Atlantic Coast. The cold spell is an aftermath of the violent wind and snowstorm which took at least 123 lives in the Great Lakes region in the past several days.

The heavy rain here—nearly an inch and a half in the past two days—were to let up this afternoon, with clear skies to follow. Yesterday's high of 45 dropped to 38 at night.

In the upper Midwest, survivors told harrowing tales of how hunters froze to death in a howling blizzard, how sailors were drowned when their vessels were pounded to pieces in the raging waters of Lake Michigan, where a 70-mile-an-hour gale whipped up 30-foot breakers.

Son to Follow Father's Footsteps

Representative Treadway, veteran Massachusetts Republican yesterday appointed to Annapolis the son of a youngster he appointed 23 years ago.

Navy Department officials said that they could recall no instance—at least within recent years—when a single member of Congress has been responsible for the appointment of both father and son to the Naval Academy.

In 1917, Representative Treadway—who had already served four years in the House—appointed Joseph Francis Bolger, of Adams, Mass.

Yesterday, the department received a Treadway appointment for 17-year-old Joseph Francis Bolger, jr., son of Lieut. Comdr. Bolger, United States Navy, who is now stationed at Long Beach, Calif. Young Bolger's appointment is, of course, subject to his successful passage of an entrance examination.

Representative Treadway was last week reelected for his fifteenth consecutive term. Only three members of the House have served longer.

9.4% of Chest Quota Pledged On First Day

Willett Announces $188,600 Figure at Report Luncheon

The two-week Community Chest drive got off to a flying start yesterday.

At the initial report luncheon at the Willard Hotel, 10,247 pledges for approximately $188,600, or 9.43 per cent of the $2,000,000 goal, were announced by Herbert L. Willett, jr., Chest director.

"Add a little to last year's pledge," was the plea made by Maj. Chauncey G. Parker, jr., general chairman of the drive. He pointed out that 22.2 per cent of the quota must be reported today to assure orderly attainment of the goal during the remaining 12 days.

"The heart of this campaign is formed by the volunteer workers who go out and ask for pledges." Chairman J. Clifford Folger of the advance gifts units told the 700 solicitors during the meeting.

"The pledges brought in," he continued, "keep our hospitals, children's homes and other charitable enterprises operating each year.

"Thus our effort is comparable to a bucket brigade at a country fire in which everyone does his part."

The value of constant work also was stressed by Director Willett, who asked that efforts this year be redoubled so attainment of the goal will flatten belief that "anything 13 is unlucky."

"This is the thirteenth year of the Chest and we have 13 days left to work," he asserted. "Let's turn on the heat now so that no one can say 13 was an unlucky number for us."

"Hard Days of 1941"

In discussing the work of Chest agencies, Willett emphasized the 12-month character of their work.

"As a result of last year's effort," he told the volunteer workers, "we have brought care to sick at home and in the hospital. We have made it possible for children to play in settlements and other character building organization which help them. We have kept old people

Berlin Raided As Molotoff Gives Dinner For Nazi Chiefs

By Percival Knauth
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Nov. 13.—The talks between Soviet Premier Molotoff and his associates and the German leaders wound up today in the same surroundings of secrecy which have characterized this diplomatic undertaking from the beginning. Molotoff had a four-hour luncheon with Chancellor Hitler this afternoon after having conferred earlier in the day with Reichsmarshal Goering and Deputy Nazi Leader Rudolf Hess.

The round of social festivities concluded tonight with a reception and banquet given at the Soviet Embassy. The dinner, at which Premier Molotoff entertained a number of German leaders, began at the early hour of 7 o'clock, as has become customary in Berlin in view of the possibility of early air raids.

[The precaution apparently was in vain, as British bombers struck at Berlin late in the evening, in what Nazis charged was a deliberate effort to "disturb" the Russian party, according to International News Service. Guests paid no attention to the alarm sirens, the United Press said, and did not go to shelters.

Bombs Fall on Fringes of City

[An official German communique said the British raiders failed to penetrate suburban antiaircraft fire, and dropped their bombs "aimlessly" on the fringes of Berlin.

[The British have insisted their Berlin raids have been directed only at military objectives—most of which, such as factories, power plants, railroad yards and airdromes, would naturally lie in suburban areas.]

Guests at the Embassy dinner included Von Ribbentrop and leading functionaries of the German foreign office, as well as other governmental personalities with whom Molotoff and his delegation have come into

Dies Hearings Set Next Week

By the Associated Press

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, announced yesterday after an exchange of messages with the State Department that his House investigating committee would start hearings here next week on the activities of German and Italian consular and other agents in the United States.

Advised by Secretary of State Hull to use his own judgment on starting public hearings, Dies said he was unable yet to say whether they would be open to the public.

After receiving Hull's telegram, Dies said at Lake Charles, La., that the hearings would start in the Capital next Monday or Tuesday.

The committee's records, he said, contained more evidence against Italian diplomatic agents than against German agents in this country.

Both Italian and German embassies have denied that officials of their governments in the United States were engaged in any activities outside of their official duties.

French Colony Government Announces 'Consolidation of Good Relations' With America After Admiral's Visit

By the Associated Press

Fort de France, Martinique, Nov. 13.—The government of this French island colony in the Caribbean announced tonight "consolidation of good relations" with the United States through a visit today by United States Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade, and it was reported that an unspecified amount of French dollar credits had been released for purchase of supplies in the United States.

[The report of release of dollar credits was heard also in Washington, where a State Department official said also that negotiations have been concluded for the establishment of friendly contacts between American authorities in Martinique and the colonial government.

[The amount of French credits made available for use of the Martinique government was not disclosed but it was indicated that the full amount sought by the colony had been released. The funds were needed to buy flour, gasoline and other supplies.

William C. Bullitt has submitted his resignation as Ambassador to France and it is believed that President Roosevelt will accept it.

Whether Bullitt will be given another ambassadorial post or some other high Government office has apparently not yet been decided. His name is prominently mentioned as the successor to Joseph P. Kennedy, as Ambassador to Great Britain, but there has been no official intimation that a decision has been reached in regard to this post. It is generally assumed that Kennedy will not go back to London, as was indicated when he returned to this country shortly before the Presidential election.

Shanghai (Thursday), Nov. 14.—Japan has evolved a definite formula for tapering off her undeclared war with China and now is preparing for a push to the southward, possibly designed to hank Britain's great Singapore naval base, according to reports in diplomatic circles today.

The Japanese have come to a "final agreement" with Russia outlining each nation's sphere of influence in Asia, according to the reports, and have concentrated large numbers of soldiers on Hainan Island, off the coast of French Indo-China, which will serve as a starting point for the "southward push."

A reported British-American decision regarding joint policy in the Pacific and joint use of the Singapore base by the British and American fleets was believed linked to

Battleships Proven Useless? U. S. Experts Still Say 'No'

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Military experts here yesterday viewed the British air raid on Italy's Taranto naval base as perhaps the most decisive blow Britain has struck in the war, but wondered if there might not be a boomerang in the English victory.

For the crippling of two or three Italian dreadnaughts, claimed by the British, marked the first occasion in history that air power had wrecked a battleship, and such big ships form the backbone of Britain's superior sea power, her greatest trump card in the war.

If England can cripple Italian battleships by air power, cannot Germany's vaunted aerial fleet knock out Britain's navy? Does the action at Taranto perhaps show Hitler the way to victory?

While military authorities were asking these questions, naval ex-

Italians Scatter; Greece Reports Seizure of More Albanian Hills

By Max Harrelson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Athens, Greece, Nov. 13.—The Greek high command declared tonight that in "successful attacks" in the Pindus Mountains region its troops had occupied a new series of hill tops on Albanian territory.

No more precise location of the counter-offensive was given, but a government spokesman had said earlier that the Greeks were moving forward rapidly in a mop-up of territory abandoned by the Italian invaders in the Pindus region and along the Greek west wing.

[Italian forces which penetrated 3 miles into Greece on the central fighting front near Mesaria, were forced to withdraw into Albania when they were caught in a heavy Greek artillery crossfire from the mountains, according to frontier dispatches reaching Belgrade, the United Press said.

[The Italian troops, comprising a new Fascist division, crossed the Greek frontier early today, it was said, and the Greeks let them penetrate 3 miles before opening a heavy artillery crossfire from the rugged mountains that hemmed in the advance route.

[Italian Alpine columns numbering several thousand men were reported wandering aimlessly in the mountains and valleys of the rugged Pindus region, harassed constantly by Greek "mopping up" patrols.]

Macedonian Sector Quiet

There was little or no activity in the Macedonian sector, the Athens spokesman reported, adding that Greek troops still were "holding fast the positions they occupied days ago."

A British air communique issued from Greek headquarters told of new successful attacks by the R. A. F. on Valona and Durazzo, Albanian ports, last night, and said "long range bombers successfully attacked oil refineries at Bari (Italian base

Nazi Super-Sub Worries British

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 13.—A supreme German effort to wreck the British convoy system next spring was forecast today by Ronald H. Cross, minister of shipping, in the House of Commons. He declared, however, that British strength would improve until "we achieve a mastery of attacks on convoys both by sea and air."

Giving point to Cross' forecast was word in neutral naval quarters that big German submarines, carrying 20 torpedoes and operating partly as surface craft, constituted the newest menace to British shipping—"a menace more dangerous than any pocket battleship."

In size these U-boats are outdone only by the French submarine Surcouf, with its surface displacement of 2,880 tons. At dusk they turn surface raiders when most submarines are required to take it easy while charging batteries for the next day's submerged activity.

The speed and course of convoys are determined by conning tower listening devices similar to those

English Press Assault Home On Fleet 'Nestling' in Base; Naval Balance Redressed, Exultant Churchill Asserts

By Raymond Daniell
Copyright by New York Times

London, Nov. 13.—In characteristically dramatic fashion, Prime Minister Churchill walked onto the floor of the House of Commons today shuffling three sheets of paper and smiling broadly. He had news—good news—he said. Then he proceeded to pour it out tersely and concisely before the House, which rose and roared its cheers.

Half of Premier Mussolini's battleships, the prime minister said, had been wrecked by British planes—probably torpedo bombers—which had flown over the Italian naval base of Taranto and attacked the fleet which could not be tempted to come out to test its strength against the British Mediterranean fleet.

The result of this action by the fleet air arm, Churchill said, affects not only the balance of naval power in the Mediterranean, but the question of sea power in all parts of the globe.

CONTE di CAVOUR

This was great and important news to this island people, who were informed officially earlier in the day that enemy action in the first 12 months of the war had resulted in the destruction of 1,611,842 tons of British shipping, 474,816 tons of Allied ships and another 769,212 tons of neutral ships.

The story Churchill told so tersely in the House of Commons was explained and amplified later in a series of admiralty communiques giving details of the attack on Taranto and telling of other severe blows the navy and its air arm had delivered against Italy in fulfillment of the prime minister's recent promise to give all help possible to Greece by intensification of the attacks on Italy.

These official bulletins disclosed that while the fleet air arm was pounding the Italian fleet the navy was delivering telling blows at Italy's communications with its troops in Albania and Libya.

One communique said light forces of the British navy intercepted a convoy in the Straits of Otranto, between Italy and Albania, off the Albanian port of Valona. Of four supply ships, the statement said, one was sunk outright, two were set afire and "almost certainly sunk," and the fourth was damaged but escaped under a smoke screen. Both the escorting destroyers escaped at high speed, but one was damaged, while the British ships got off without damage or casualties.

The night before this British attack was pressed home in what the Fascists like to regard as an Italian sea, the British navy carried out a heavy bombardment of Sidi Barrani in Egypt and a British submarine attacked a convoy of two supply ships escorted by a destroyer bound for Libya, sinking one 3,000-ton vessel loaded with supplies and damaging a second which was believed sunk.

Disclosure of these exploits in the Mediterranean intensified a surge of Britain's pride in her navy resulting from the heroic action of the armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay, which went down in the North Atlantic last week under the guns of a German surface raider. The admiralty yesterday announced that most of the 38 ships in the convoy attacked by the raider had been saved by the Jervis Bay, and that 24 were already safe in port. Today, six more reached port safely, leaving only eight unaccounted for. Of these, the admiralty says, at least three are "certainly" safe.

["Survivors" of four ships of the convoy reached Canada today, the Associated Press reported, indicating at least four were sunk.]

R. A. F. Smashes Anew at Albanian Ports

Against Italy, the army and the Roya Air Force also were active in the past few days, British announced. R. A. F. bombers today bombed Durazzo and Valona, Italian bases in Albania, for the second consecutive day, causing heavy new damage, while other raiders struck at Italian bases in East Africa.

British and Indian troops meanwhile were said unofficially to have captured, lost, and recaptured from Italian and Askari troops the important Sudanese base of Gallabat, in several days of heavy desert fighting.

The most important news of all as far as the future of the war at sea is concerned, however, was the fleet air arm's attack on Taranto, where half of Premier Mussolini's six battleships were put out of action, according to reports of bomber pilots, whose stories, it was said, were confirmed by photographs taken later by reconnaissance planes.

Supplementing Churchill's concise but gleeful report, the admiralty communiques said one Italian battleship of the Littorio class was seen after the attack listing heavily to starboard, her bow so deep under water that her forecastle was covered. Unofficially it was believed that aerial torpedoes must have been used to inflict such heavy damage on a modern battleship.

Italy has two newly commissioned ships of this class, the Littorio and Vittorio Veneto, and they are among the most powerful battlewagons in the world, each mounting nine 15-inch guns.

A battleship of the Cavour class, 23,622 tons, it was said, lay beached with so much of her stern submerged that her after turret was awash. The admiralty said it appeared that another battleship of the Cavour class was also "severely" damaged.

Italy as four of this class battleship—the Conte di Cavour, Giulio Cesare, Caio Duilio and Andrea Doria—with main armament of ten 12.6-inch guns each.

In the inner harbor two cruisers listed heavily to starboard surrounded by fuel oil and two fleet auxiliaries are lying on their sterns partly submerged. Although the Italian communique Tuesday claimed the destruction of six British planes, the admiralty said only two were missing.

Tonight A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, declared in a broadcast "this has been the most important week in the history of naval operations in this war."

The crippling attack on the Italian fleet at its base, Alexander said, was the climax of a "black" week for Italian arms. They had been defeated at Gallabat and a whole division of crack troops in Greece had been destroyed in retreat. The bombing of Italian bases in Albania and Italy, especially Taranto, were blows inflicted at every arm of the Italian forces, he said. Mussolini, he said, must see the writing on the wall and know that he is "going to be beaten."

Alexander disclosed that the aircraft carriers Eagle and Illustrous took part in the Taranto attack, which was carried out by moonlight in the face of heavy antiaircraft fire and despite a balloon barrage.

The action at Taranto, he said, was a clear answer to the repeated assertions of the Nazis and their supporters that democracy was "decadent," for in one "swift, decisive stroke" the Royal navy had reduced the Italian battle line from six effective ships to three.

Alexander, who last week said the Italian admirals appeared to regard their capital ships as long-term investments, told a radio audience that the navy had "imposed a capital levy" upon Mussolini's navy.

Until the Taranto action took place, he disclosed, the British battle fleet in the Mediterranean was numerically weaker than Italy's, but, he added, "for reasons best known to themselves, the Italians did not seek to exploit their superiority."

Instead, the Italian fleet chose to remain immobile behind the defenses of their harbor, avoiding the action which the British Mediterranean fleet eagerly sought. These, however, failed to preserve them from the bombs of the fleet air arm.

A Defeat 'Within Their Inglorious Shelter'

Alexander added:

"Within their inglorious shelter the Italian battle fleet suffered a defeat which could only have been redeemed in the public mind had the fleet shown itself willing to accept battle at sea. Their numerical superiority has been reduced to inferiority in an action in which the dispositions of the admirals only allowed them to offer a passive defense."

In the opinion of naval observers here the action at Taranto should have an important bearing on the progress of the war in the Mediterranean sector. A substantial reduction in the battleship strength of the Italian navy, together with the fact that the British fleet now has the use of anchorages in Greek territory, should facilitate the harrying of Italian communications not only across the Mediterranean to Libya and eastward to the Dodecanese Islands, but also across the southern Adriatic to Albania.

Taranto has been the principal base for the Italian fleet since the war broke out, as in the last war when its chief function was to mask the Austrian fleet and to be ready to engage it if it attempted to leave the Adriatic. Today it is the nearest fully-fortified naval base to that part of the Mediterranean across which vital communications with the Italian forces in Libya must be maintained. It is the harbor to which the Italian fleet has retired each time the British Mediterranean forces tried to engage it.

There is an inner and outer harbor at Taranto, the inner one being completely landlocked. The communique suggested that battleships were in the outer harbor and cruisers and auxiliaries inside.

The announcement did not state the class of the cruisers disabled in the attack, but even with two out of action Italy still has 16 modern cruisers.

[Italy has placed greater reliance in submarines, destroyers and fast, light cruisers than in capital ships. Thus the halving of battleship strength for Italy may not mean what it would to other naval powers, the Associated Press pointed out.

[The bombing of Taranto is expected nevertheless to release some powerful units of the British Mediterranean fleet to hunt down the Atlantic raider, which may be a German pocket-battleship. Only three ships in the British navy, the battlecruisers Hood, Renown and Repulse, are accounted individually fast enough and powerful enough to catch and defeat one of these 10,000-ton craft. Germany reportedly has two pocket-battleships left, the Admiral Scheer and the Luetzow.

[Almost as though reflecting these reports of naval victories, the British government announced extension of the blockade to include Syria, French West Africa, Liberia, Portuguese Guinea, Madagascar and Reunion Island.

[Blockade vessels were ordered to halt ships in sea zones off these territories, on three sides of Africa, unless the vessels have navicerts, or certificates of prior inspection and approval of their cargoes by the British.]

13 Canadians Died on Jervis Bay

Ottawa, Nov. 13 (AP).—Canadian naval service headquarters announced tonight that 13 seamen of the Royal Canadian navy were "missing and believed killed in action" in the loss of the British armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay.

[No figures were available on total casualties on the Jervis Bay. Presumably there were casualties other than Canadian. Sixty-five survivors have been brought to an eastern Canadian port.

[The British admiralty said that in view of the weather conditions "it must be considered unlikely that there are other survivors."]

90 Survivors Land From Convoy

St. John's, Newfoundland, Nov. 13 (AP).—Ninety survivors of four ships sunk by a Nazi raider were brought to a Newfoundland port today aboard a vessel which rescued them after 36 hours in tossing lifeboats.

The survivors said their ships were attacked by a large ship with "deadly accurate" guns. The raider's method, they said, was to disable steering gear and then finish off her prey at close range.

One lifeboat from each lost vessel is still unaccounted for here, though other ships may have found them.

U. S. Experts Still Favor Seapower

perts here had a definite answer to them—No!

On the basis of meager reports from abroad, they saw rather important results from the action, favorable results not only to the British, but to the future of navies.

Navy men pointed to the fact that the raid was made by naval planes, operating from aircraft carriers of the fleet, and concluded from the details given that they dropped torpedoes—a naval weapon—rather than bombs.

This shows the need for a strong naval air arm and plenty of carriers, they declare.

Moreover, the Navy's stand in the air power vs. sea power discussion has not been that planes cannot sink battleships. It is admitted that they can if they hit often enough and hard enough.

Defense Decisive Element

These experts declaret hat adequate defepse measures taken against aerial attack can prevent naval forces from being knocked out and their vital blockading role eliminated.

From the reports available they believe the Italians were caught unprepared at Taranto. The British admiralty said that the raid was carried out in the face of heavy antiaircraft fire and despite a balloon barrage, but said nothing of defending aircraft. A maxim of modern warfare is that planes are the best defense against planes.

Most experts agree, however, that while not dooming sea power, the action illustrates the great importance of air power in modern war, and may open the eyes of some naval men who have underestimated the role of aviation in sea operations.

An important result of the crippling of a large part of the Italian fleet will be to increase greatly the effectiveness of the British naval forces in the Mediterranean and perhaps enable them to completely cut the Axis line of communications with the Fascist army attacking Egypt from Libya.

Heretofore, British forces in the Mediterranean were little if any stronger in numbers than Mussolini's fleet, and a wide dispersement of warships for an effective blockade patrol was not possible. If such had been done, the Italian fleet might have come out of harbor and cut off the British forces piece-meal.

It also makes offensive naval operations possible, perhaps even into the Adriatic, experts believe. While the Italian ships probably can be repaired and put back in service, on the basis of the British description of the damage done, it should be many months before such repairs can be completed.

used by antiaircraft batteries on land, it was said.

The attack is made at an angle which gives the torpedo officer a target of an almost unbroken line of freighters. Firing in salvo, he is almost certain to score three hits out of each salvo of four torpedoes.

After using all its torpedoes the submarine retires, still on the surface, at a speed of 19 knots, twice its top underwater speed.

Trying to curb Germany's U-boat activity, the Royal Air Force has been smashing repeatedly at such seaboard points of the continent as Lorient, France, a known submarine base. Lorient, other invasion bases on the German-held French coast and oil plants, factories, airports and transport centers in Germany and the Netherlands were bombed last night.

Axis Fleets Join To Blockade Britain

Italy Reports Ships Entering Atlantic To Help Nazis Starve Out Isles; Gayda Blames Reverses on Weather

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 13.—The Fascist press reported today that German and Italian naval forces, intent on tightening the counter-blockade of the British Isles, were concentrating in the North Atlantic shipping lanes to smash at British supply ships.

Both Il Giornale D'Italia, whose editor, Virginia Gayda, frequently voices Premier Mussolini's ideas, and the Duce's own paper, Il Popolo D'Italia, mentioned the new Axis plan.

Il Popolo D'Italia said dozens of Italian submarines now were operating in the Atlantic, and Gayda noted that these submarines, hitherto busy in the central lanes, have moved farther north.

While the Italian high command reported that British planes had attacked Italian naval bases at Brindisi, Bari and Taranto, it limited its communique to the declaration that bombs were dropped only on Bari, an Adriatic port, where three persons were wounded and slight damage was caused.

[Tuesday's communique, however, acknowledged British planes had severely damaged an Italian warship at Taranto but said that six of the British raiders had been shot down.]

Italian troops in Greece, the communique said, repulsed a Greek attack on outposts in the Epirus region near the Albanian frontier, and a heavy artillery duel and considerable patrol activity has taken place in a sector between Koritza, Albania, and Florina, Greece.

Dispatches to Rome reported heavy air raids by large squadrons of Italian planes, particularly in the Lake Presba region near the frontiers of Greece, Albania and Yugoslavia.

Greek planes were also reported to have raided Durazzo, an important Albanian port.

Greek Troops Strafed

The Italian air force, the communique said, attacked Greek troop positions in the Pindus Mountains, just north of Jannina, and around Kalibaki, in northwestern Greece.

The communique said that "offensive exploration" flights had been made over Malta, a British naval base, and that Italian bombers had scored hits on "military installations of the Suez Canal," flying fields at Cairo, Egypt, and elsewhere in North Africa.

The Fascist press published editorials today speaking of the wide range of the Italian front and declaring the men had to fight under the very worst conditions in Egypt and Greece.

Both Parties Map Future Strategy

G. O. P. Seen Acting to Keep Martin on Job; Clubs Gird to Form 'Loyal Opposition;' Democrats May Counter With 'Independents'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Stripped again to skeleton strength, Democratic and Republican National organizations yesterday slipped 1940 from the political calendar and mapped campaign plans four years ahead.

Pointing for the Congressional elections two years away and the Presidential campaign of 1944, both party organizations were drawing on 1940 runs and errors for probable changes in set-up.

While National committees of each party, meeting in midwinter or early spring, will have the final say, plans already were in the mill for reorganization of personnel and strategy by the "loyal opposition" and the Democratic victors.

First move of the Democrats, it was indicated, will be to fill the committee secretary's post vacated by L. W. (Chip) Robert in midcampaign, vest new authority in the office, and install the appointee in charge of the Washington office when Chairman Edward J. Flynn is basent in New York. An alternative plan is to put the Washington office in charge of a Democratic vice chairman.

Tentative Republican plans called for leaving vacant at least until the G. O. P. national committee meets the new office of "executive director" from which John D. M. Hamilton recently resigned.

Despite Monday's announcement by Republican Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., that he will serve only until the next National Committee meeting, an effort is expected to retain Martin in the job at least through the 1942 Congressional elections. Should the committee approve and Martin consent to stay on, another prominent Republican politician would be installed in the executive director's post to relieve the chairman of the more arduous routine.

Regardless of the shifts under streamlining plans, two familiar faces will continue at their desks at Washington headquarters of each party, it was learned—Charles Michelson, Democratic publicity chief of his staff, and Franklin Waltman, jr., information officer for the Republican National Committee.

Wendell L. Willkie, reported interested in neither Republican Party office nor a Cabinet role under the President, is expected to continue leading spokesman for his party, regardless of his wishes. Other Republican leaders appeared reassured from Willkie's Monday night speech that he will not use the role as a personal political springboard. He will have an important say, though not necessarily the determining choice, in national committee selection of the next chairman. Willkie made it clear that the 1944 field is wide open, and all of the old Republican hats and some new ones will probably be in the ring.

Willkie club leaders meanwhile were swift to act on the Republican nominee's suggestion for continuing the independent club set-ups, unidentified with his name.

First step toward welding this group permanently into the "loyal opposition" was taken in New York when Oren Root, jr., head of the Associated Willkie Clubs, announced a conference of club leaders next month to organize under a new name, "We The People." Up to the present no formal proposals have been made to consolidate the independent clubs into the regular Republican organization. "Professional" versus "amateur" animosities are still rife in the ragular ranks, and any sharp party realignment on these lines might engage Congressional Republican opposition.

Democrats may counter the Willkie club strategy as they did in the campaign with their own independent group, the Norris-LaGuradia Committee of Independents for Roosevelt, under Tommy Corcoran.

Decision of Chairman Flynn to make New York his permanent residence and commute once of twice a week to Washington headquarters ended speculation on his following in James A. Farley's footsteps as both National Chairman and Postmaster General.

Absence of Farley from the Washington scene, with his familiar finger on every party contact, is frankly conceded by professional Democrats a party loss hard to repair. This the proposed strengthening of Washington headquarters is designed in part to meet.

Is THAT All?

Greater East Asia Aims Are Revealed

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Nov. 13.—Though the scope of the new order in Greater East Asia has never been officially described, it is defined by Admiral Sankachi Takahashi, late commander in chief of Japan's combined fleet, in the current number of the magazine Hinode (Sunrise) as follows:

"It begins with Manchukuo in the north and extends to Australia in the south. In the east it ends at the 180th parallel and extends west to the Bay of Bengal and Burma. It will be constructed in several stages.

"In the first stage the sphere of Japanese demands includes Manchukuo, French Indo-China, Burma, the Straits Settlements, the Dutch East Indies, New Caledonia, New Guinea, many islands in the West Pacific, Japan's mandated islands, and the Philippines. Australia and the Indies can be included later. Greater East Asia will be built up in proportion to Japan's national strength. The greater our strength the larger will be the sphere of Greater East Asia."

U. S., Martinique Settle Problems

Admiral Greenslade flew to Fort de France, Martinique, November 2 in a Navy plane for conferences with Admiral Georges Robert, high commissioner of the French Antilles, and returned to Washington November 5.

(The French Caribbean possessions, particularly Martinique, have been considered potential hot spots since the German conquest of France, due to the presence there of about 100 American-made warplanes and several French warships as well as several million dollars in gold reported to have been stored at Fort de France.)

Suggesting that everything had been straightened out, a French communique issued after Admiral Greenslade's visit said:

"The object of the visit was for the consolidation of good relations between American authorities and the high commissioner. The happy outcome of the discussions should end the tendentious alarmist rumors which have circulated in recent weeks.

"The conversations dealt with solution of common problems, the first effect of which should be easing the problem of supplies for the Antilles.

"No doubt the American acquisition of naval and air bases in the British Antilles and the preparation of these bases will lead to greater activity of American air and naval forces in the neighborhood of Martinique and Guadeloupe without it becoming necessary to conduct direct surveillance of these islands."

Recent resumption of trade with North African and American ports was regarded here as already tending to settle the supply question, partly through American influence.

The colonial government recently ordered flour, gasoline, paper, medicines and other supplies in the United States, it being reported that French dollar credits were released for this purpose by the Vichy government.

84th Birthday Observed By Brandeis

JUSTICE BRANDEIS

Roosevelt, Many Others Felicitate Retired High Court Justice

Louis D. Brandeis, retired justice of the Supreme Court, yesterday observed his eighty-fourth birthday at his apartment, 220 California Street Northwest.

President Roosevelt sent flowers and a message of congratulation to the noted jurist. Other birthday messages came from leaders of the bar, former colleagues on the bench and numerous Zionist organizations.

Mrs. Brandeis told reporters her husband's health was good. He spends most of his time "seeing people" and "helping wherever he can," she said. Among callers at the Brandeis home yesterday were Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter.

Justice Brandeis, who has taken an active interest for three decades in the movement for a Jewish homeland in Palestine, was honored at Zionist meetings held yesterday throughout the country.

Birthday messages from the Zionist groups to Justice Brandeis voiced the hope that the day is not far distant for "the victory of democracy and a Zion rebuilt."

In Palestine, according to a dispatch received at Zionist headquarters here, American Jewish colonists marked Justice Brandeis' birthday with special festivities.

Justice Brandeis was understood to be anxious to devote more time to the Zionist movement when he retired from the Supreme Court February 13, 1939. He made no public statement at the time of his retirement, however, and has given no interviews or speeches since. He had served on the high court since 1916.

White House Neutral Over Adjournment

Early Says President Wants Congress to 'Make Own Decision'

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

As House Democratic leaders worked for adjournment next Tuesday, President Roosevelt said through his secretary yesterday that he wanted Congress to "make its own decision" on ending the session.

The President has no new legislation to send to the present Congress nor is he particularly interested in any pending bill, his secretary, Stephen Early, declared.

But, said Early, "the President is and has been at all times entirely willing and agreeable for the Congress to continue the present three-day recess arrangement, to meet in continuous session or to adjourn."

Prior to the White House statement, Speaker Rayburn and Majority Whip Boland said a vote on adjournment would be taken Tuesday. Telegrams have been sent to absent Democrats to return by then for "an important vote."

"I am confident that we can get a sine die adjournment resolution through the House if we get the members here," the Speaker said.

In any case, Minority Leader Martin, who has repeatedly opposed adjournment, declared that he would insist on a roll call on the motion. The Republicans are expected to vote against it en masse.

The only legislation of any importance that still seems to have a chance of House passage is the conference report on the Ramspeck Civil Service bill and a measure to create the post of Undersecretary of War.

Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, said he hoped to arrive at an agreement on the Federal employes bill at a projected conference committee meeting Monday; while Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee, indicated he was attempting to get action on the War Department bill.

In the Senate, principal obstacle to adjournment is the Walter-Logan biill to curb independent administrative agencies, which has passed the House. That measure, now considered as good as dead this session, may be debated a day or two next week. Then, if it is passed, it will almost certainly be vetoed.

Senate passage of the sine die adjournment resolution was yesterday predicted for probably Tuesday, and certainly not later than Wednesday.

President Roosevelt's statement through Early was apparently provoked by a newspaper story to the effect that he had told his legislative leaders to "get Congress out of town." Through his secretary, the President categorically denied making such a statement.

The statement said that "a certain newspaper story referred to was that printed by the Chicago Tribune under the name of Villard Edwards which said, 'Get Congress out of town'—'that was the first command given since his third-term victory by President Roosevelt to his legislative leaders.'

"The President has made no such statement at any time to any of his so-called legislative leaders."

Asserting that the President "believes that Congress should make its own decision," Early said the Chief Executive "did tell Speaker Rayburn today that insofar as he was concerned, he did not have any new legislation of such importance as to jusify its being sent to the present Congress."

"Neither was he particularly interested in any legislation already introduced or pending before the present Congress, certain newspaper stories to the contrary notwithstanding," Early continued.

Union Rights In Navy Yards Are Sought

Metal Trades Branch Of A.F.L. Says Workers Are Denied Privileges

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Nov. 13.—Full rights of American workers to organize and participate in union activity in United States Navy Yards were asked today by the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

A committee report adopted in the final session of the department's convention here declared that "certain inalienable rights are being denied workers in some categories in the navy yards through the order issued by the Navy Department under the date of October 11, 1939."

Meantime the building and trades department, opening its meeting in advance of next week's general sessions of the A. F. of L. here, listened to praise of Government recognition of the 40-hour week in the national defense program and condemnation of the Works Project Administration.

John P. Coyne, president, said the Government had recognized the 40-hour week for the first time for Government construction in the defense program and declared there was no shortage of skilled workers in any field so far in the program.

A warning was issued by James Marshall, of Washington associate national director of the Associated General Contractors of America, that "Government competition must not supplant private workers."

Marshall charged that "there never was an excuse for the WPA" and said "the public and the Government understand the harmful effects of the WPA."

Prospective peace between the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O., headed by John L. Lewis, was a leading subject before the delegates in advance of the arrival tomorrow of William Green, president o tfhe A. F. of L.

Great interest today attached to announcement that the A. F. of L. convention, opening Monday, would be addressed by Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union Congress and head of the labor movement in England.

Green Sees Labor Peace Move

President Roosevelt is going to act soon to bring peace between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

This definite prediction was made at the White House yesterday by William Green, A. F. L. president, after a conference with the President.

The President's action probably will take the form of a message to the A. F. L. convention, Green indicated.

"I judge he will ask for peace," the labor leader told reporters. "He did before and I am of the opinion that he will again."

Green, saying he had told the President that the A. F. L. would be glad to meet with the C. I. O. again in "honest" efforts to close the ranks, declared that labor peace would be "greatly facilitated" if John L. Lewis would "get out of a commanding position" in the C. I. O.

Green made it plain that he meant Lewis should not only resign as C. I. O. president, but should also relinquish the presidency of the United Mine Workers, the only salaried job Lewis holds.

Lewis promised during the recent election campaign to leave his C. I. O. post if Wendell Willkie were deefated. Friends of Lewis have insisted during the past few days that he will carry out his pledge.

Green asserted yesterday that the C. I. O. was dominated by the Mine Workers Union.

There has been "some improvement" in prospects for peace in labor, Green said, since discussions between A. F. L. and C. I. O. peace committees were broken off some months ago.

He attributed the improvement to a stronger sentiment among the rank and file of union members and to what he said was a belief that Lewis does not hold "quite the same influence among the rank and file that he did when negotiations were carried on before."

Green said that peace negotiations should be "taken up where we left off," referring to an earlier peace formula which he asserted had been vetoed by Lewis after it had been reached by a negotiating committee.

The formula which the A. F. L. chief proposed yesterday as the starting point for new discussions provides, he said:

Return of the original nine unions which withdrew from the A. F. L., under Lewis' leadership, to the parent organization.

Merger of new C. I. O. unions and parallel A. F. L. organizations so there would be no conflicting groups in the same field.

A waiting period for the United Mine Workers, before coming back into the fold, until a complete settlement had been reached.

C. I. O. Attitude Unknown

What reception would be accorded Green's offer by the C. I. O. could not be determined in Washington last night. All C. I. O. leaders were in Atlantic City for the opening Monday of the organization's annual convention, crucial this year because the C. I. O. may lose its founder and leader.

It was understood in labor circles, nevertheless, that election of Sidney Hillman or Philip Murray to the C. I. O. presidency next week would greatly enhance the changes for successful peace talks.

Hillman, a member of the Defense Commission, is very close to President Roosevelt, Murray, second in command to Lewis in the United Mine Workers, supported President Roosevelt for election to a third term while Lewis was supporting Willkie.

Roosevelt Pledges 'Anew' to Seek Unity

President Adds Voice To Drive to Heal Election Wounds

President Roosevelt yesterday added his voice to those who have pledged national unity.

Noting a bipartisan drive to heal the wounds left by last week's election, the President stated:

"I pledge anew my determination to work shoulder to shoulder with all those who place true Americanism above all other considerations."

His declaration came as an answer to "thousands of well-wishers," some of whom "did not cast their votes for the Administration," who have sent him congratulatory messages since November 5.

The White House has been besieged by a flood of telegrams and letters that at one point reached the rate of 900 incoming telegrams per hour.

The President's statement was the first formal call for national unity issued by the White House since the election. It followed by two days the speech of Wendell Willkie, unsuccessful Republican candidate, who on Monday night pledged his support of the President while asking his followers to act as a "loyal opposition" to the Administration.

Future moves to heal class, party and factional lines throughout the Nation were foreshadowed by the President's unity call yesterday.

First on the list of goals to be achieved in the striving for unity is peace within the ranks of labor. All indications at the White House yesterday were that the President would use his influence with members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and American Federation of Labor at their coming conventions to close labor's ranks.

White House circles believe that the move for labor peace will be only the first of a series of steps toward closing the ranks in many other channels of national life.

The President's statement yesterday follows:

"In the face of a constantly mounting number of congratulatory messages, I feel that I must, in this statement, extend my hearty thanks to all who have thus remembered me.

"I am heartened and encouraged by all these messages of good will from thousands of well-wishers.

"Not less appreciated than the others are the pledges of loyalty and support received from sincere men and women who did not cast their votes for the Administration. These messages, in particular, reflect a spirit of national unity in essential things, which is most welcome. In union we shall find our true strength.

"To all who have sent their greetings I give this assurance of gratitude and heartfelt appreciation. In acknowledgingthe se pledges of loyal support and full cooperation in forwarding the interests of the Nation, I pledge anew my determination to work shoulder to shoulder with .l who place true Americanism above all other considerations."

Bullitt Mentioned As London Envoy

was cut when a photographer's flashlight bulb exploded during the interview.]

[It was pointed out in official circles here that all of this country's Ambassadors will submit their resignations prior to termination of the present Presidential term.—Editor's note.]

There has been no mention of a new Ambasasdor to France in conjecture among officials. Bullitt's resignation originally was submitted soon after his return from Vichy, following the fall of France and the disappearance of the French republic, but at that time President Roosevelt asked him to defer it until after the election.

He was appointed Ambassador to France in 1936, having served previously for three years in Moscow as the first American Ambassador after the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Bullitt's resignation is not the only one now on President Roosevelt's desk. William Phillips tendered his resignation as Ambassador to Italy soon after his return on a leave of absence late in the summer. Since then he has been ill but is now convalescing.

While he continues officially as Ambassador, the State Department plans to send Alexander C. Kirk, until recently charge d'affaires in Berlin, to Rome as charge d'affaires. He is now here for consultation.

There is also some question about the future status of John Cudahy, Ambassador to Belgium, who returned last summer for consultation, only to be rebuked for having allegedly spoken too freely in London concerning the circumstances of the fall of Belgium. The rebuke was later followed by a reconcillation.

Gillette Urges Laws to Curb 'Smear' Moves

By the Associated Press

Voluminous exhibits of "smear literature" from the Presidential election campaign prompted Senator Gillette (Democrat), Iowa, to advance two recommendations yesterday for legislative curbs on such vote-seeking appeals.

The "smear" collection, large, and increasing in size, accumulated rapidly after Gillette urged the public and political organizations to send in all campaign material of an objectionable or malign nature.

The Senator told reporters he would ask the special Senate Campaign Investigating Committee to consider these remedial proposals:

Heavy penalties for printing and circulating false statements in a national campaign.

A requirement that printers place their names and addresses on all literature produced for a national campaign.

Gillette coupled his recommendation with the proviso that any precautionary legislation be carefully drafted so as not to "infringe upon our tradition for freedom of the press, speech and assembly."

As chairman of the special committee designed by the Senate to police the 1940 elections, Gillette indicated that his group probably would propose "corrective legislation" for the Hatch Act provisions limiting expenditures in behalf of a Presidential candidate to $3,000,000 in an election year.

There have been assertions that the total outlays of each major party surpassed that limit, even though Democratic and Republican National Committees did not exceed the legal mark. The spending of auxiliary campaign organizations was held responsible for sending gross expenditures through the Hatch Act "ceiling."

Discussing "smear literature," Gillette said that he was receiving a "very large number of samples of scurrilous and vicious campaign materials used in the national campaign in all parts of the country.

"About 98 per cent of this smear stuff contains no identification whatever of its source or the printer. If the law required that names of the printing establishments be included, that would be at least a step toward stopping this."

Exhibits, he said, varied from small cards carrying obscenities to handsomely illustrated pamphlets and brochures.

"Much of the protested material apparently was issued within a few hours of the time to vote in an attempt to appeal to religious, racial, or other group prejudices and emotions," the Senator said.

D. C. Union Urges Lewis' Retention

A resolution urging the retention of John L. Lewis as president of the C. I. O. was adopted with one dissenting vote last night by the Washington Chapter of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians (C. I. O.).

The organization, meeting at the Bookshop, 916 Seventeenth Street Northwest, declared "reactionary, antilabor forces are seeking to split the C. I. O. by attacking its foremost leader."

Lord Lothian, Hoare To Confer at Lisbon

Lisbon, Nov. 13 (AP).—Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, is expected to reach Lisbon by plane from London tomorrow for a conference with Sir Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador to Spain, who already is here. Lord Lothian previously had been expected here today, presumably en route back to Washington, but was delayed.

Catholic Hierarchy Backs Defense Program

Members of the Catholic hierarchy yesterday pledged support to America's defense efforts, at the same time citing the appeal of Pope Pius XII for universal peace prayers on November 24.

A meeting of the archbishops and bishops of Catholic University yesterday called attention to the designation of the date as a "day of universal prayer for the war-afflicted of all nations and for the establishment of just peace and the reign of charity uniting all men in brotherly love."

The conference then declared:

"Our Nation, too, determined to perpetuate its traditional devotion to peace and the prosperity of its people, has been forced by tragic and threatening world events to resort to extraordinary peacetime measures to defend our free institutions and protect our liberties. The ready acceptance of this defense program is a heartening example of national solidarity. Whatever sacrifices may be involved in defense of the Americas will be loyally borne in generous unanimity.

"Confident that the prayers of our Holy Father with his united Christian people and the peace proposals of our President and fellow citizens must prevail, the bishops of the Catholic Church in the United States, with the flock committed to their keeping, renew their most sacred and sincere loyalty to our Government and to the basic ideals of the American republic.

"Standing ever securely upon their unswerving allegiance to our Nation since its foundation, they are again resolved to give themselves unstintingly to its defense and its lasting endurance and welfare."

Another statement from the meeting announced that more than $1,000,000 has been provided by the Catholic bishops of the United States for the relief of suffering people abroad.

Vichy Cabinet Hastily Meets; Revolt Denied

North Africa Reports Disputed; Weygand Still Ignores Recall

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Nov. 13.—An urgent session of the French cabinet was called for tomorrow following a surprise session tonight.

Contrary to custom, no communique was issued and ministers declined to give any hint as to the important questions under consideration.

Political observers pointed out that this in all likelihood meant that the government had failed to resolve major problems before it.

Simultaneously with the cabinet session, the government issued a communique denying what it called foreign rumors concerning high personalities in France's African colonies and French Indo-China.

Weygand Not Mentioned

Whether this statement concerned Gen. Maxime Weygand, Petain's personal representative in French Africa, and Admiral Jean Decoux, governor general of French Indo-China, was no tdisclosed.

(Refusal of Gen. Weygand to return to Vichy Monday as expected aroused speculation among foreign observers at Bern, Switzerland, who professed to see therein a stiffening attitude toward France's German and Italian conquerors.

(Domei, Japanese news agency, reported from Hanoi, French Indo-China, Tuesday night, that Admiral Decoux had resigned as governor-general of that French Asiatic outpost because of difficulties created by a strong group in Saigon favoring the "Free French" movement of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.)

Gen. Weygand, whose impending return to Vichy was announced recently, had not shown up tonight. (Here 12 words and the entire next paragraph were censored.)

All political observers in Vichy agreed the cabinet's discussions involved "grave problems." They also declared that relations between France and her conquerors had not improved as had been hoped at the time France agreed to "collaborate" with the Axis in its program for a "new order" in Europe.

Vichy, Nov. 13.—It was announced officially today that the French government will extend the widest clemency to young men who joined the De Gaullist movement—Frenchmen still supporting Britain in the war—under enticement on the part of "unscrupulous men or greedy intermediaries."

Ship Believed Lost In Storm Is Safe

Docks at E. Chicago; 4 Others Thought Sunk in Lake

By the Associated Press

Ludington, Mich., Nov. 13.—Return of a missing tanker to its East Chicago port allayed fears of Coast Guard officers tonight that a fifth vessel should be added to the list of those "believed lost with all hands" in Monday's Lake Michigan storm—a list upon which they based their estimate that at least 67 had perished.

Alarmed by reports that wreckage from the missing ship, the New Haven Socony, had been cast up by the waves near Grand Haven, Mich., its owners dispatched a chartered airplane from Detroit in a vain quest over the storm-lashed lake today. Word that the vessel had reached safety awaited the aerial search party when it stopped at the Grand Rapids, Mich., airport after combing 50 miles of shoreline.

The Coast Guard's life of missing vessels included two large freighters, the 7,200-ton William B. Davock and the Anna C. Minch, a 4,200-ton grain carrier, and two South Haven, Mich., fishing tugs.

For half a day, shifting winds had added no more bodies to the 16 which already lay in an improvised morgue in Salvation Army headquarters here. Those victims were seamen who wore garments stenciled with the names of the two missing freighters. The Davock carried a crew of 33 and the Minch 24.

At South Haven a requiem mass was said for the eight men aboard the missing fishing tugs and two members of the crew of the stranded Canadian pulpwood carrier Novadoc, whom survivors said were washed overboard during a night of terror that preceded their rescue.

Vivid accounts of Novadoc survivors helped knit together the fragmentary story of death and destruction which mute piles of wreckage and the lifeless bodies of seamen had already told.

Capt. Donald Steip of Wiarton, Ontario, removed by a fishing boat today with 17 of his crew, called the storm the worst in his 18 years on the lakes. "The boat just couldn't compete with the waves," he said.

Two fishing tugs, the Irene of Leland Mich., with three on board, and the Dornbos, still were unreported tonight, but little alarm was expressed for their safety.

Four vessels beside the Novadoc were hard aground. They were the City of Flint, a Pere Marquette carferry whose four passengers were removed in a surfboat today after more than 24 hours on a sandbar; the 415-foot Conneaut of Detroit, which reported a helsman injured; the gravel carrier Sinaloa, whose crew of 39 was rescued by fishing boats and Coast Guardsmen today, and the Frank J. Peterson, whose commander declined Coast Guard aid.

Welles Denies Plan to Lease Latin Bases

Question on Using Them Is Put Aside For Answer Later

The United States Government is not seeking directly or indirectly to acquire or lease naval or air bases from any Latin American country, Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, said yesterday in a written statement.

The statement followed an explanation by Welles at his press conference that the United States was not seeking to lease any sites as a part of the present program of Western Hemisphere defense, and was occasioned by a report that the United States was acquiring bases from Uruguay.

The statement was as follows:

"I want to make it very clear that the United States Government has never sought directly or indirectly to obtain the lease or cession of air and naval bases in Uruguay. As Secretary Hull has frequently stated, in none of our conversations with any of the other American republics has there ever been involved the possibility of any suggestions on our part which would affect in any sense the sovereignty of any other American nation."

The Acting Secretary was asked about the possibility of an arrangement for permission to use the bases, rather than lease them. For the time being, he replied, he would limit himself to his statement but later some more detailed announcement might be made.

Later in the day, Welles received Dr. Raul Prebisch, head of the Central Bank of Argentina, and Ambassador Felipe Espil, in an initial conversation inaugurating negotiations aimed to improve United States-Argentine financial and commercial relations. This is deemed one of the "key" problems of inter-American relations because of the similarity of agricultural and livestock production in the United States and Argentina.

Since Great Britain is the last important transatlantic market now open to Argentine commodities, any large assistance given to the southern republic either through extension of credits or United States purchase of Argentine commodities, would automatically tend to have favorable trilateral effects.

At his press conference, Welles was asked if the United States Government intended to ship food to Spain, where many persons are reported to be destitute and starving as a result not only of the British blockade on imports and the results of the long civil war, but also because of the failure of the wheat crop.

He replied that the State Department had been considering the matter for many weeks, but that it was primarily a Red Cross matter, and that no final decision had yet been reached.

Questioned as to the visit of Henry A. Wallace, Vice President-elect, to the inauguration of Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, president-elect of Mexico, in Mexico City on December 1, as the President's social Ambassador, Welles said that it indicated that the United States was taking advantage of the opportunity to demonstrate its good will toward its southern neighbor. He added that in addition to Wallace, a number of Senators and Representatives have been invited by the Mexican government and he expected that they would accept.

The possibility that the conversations between Mr. Welles and Constantine A. Oumansky, the Soviet Ambassador, concerning Soviet-American relations, might be discontinued in view of the close cooperation between the Soviet and German governments as indicated by the talks between Soviet and German officials in Berlin, was discussed, but Mr. Welles said that he saw no reason at present for ending the Soviet-American talks.

Commissioner Hazen for many years has been an advocate of a crossing between Washington and Alexandria as a means of routing heavy vehicular traffic away from the center of the city.

Funds for creation of a crime laboratory for the police department, requested in the 1942 budget, have been eliminated, it was learned yesterday.

Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson, who sponsored the project, said he was anxious to bring the local department on par with other cities which have established successful crime laboratories.

The police had requested funds to hire a chemist, skilled in criminology, who would be equipped with a laboratory in the new Municipal Center building.

The Commissioners, however, were of the opinion this work is being done "well enough" at present by the Health Department staff and in many instances by the F. B. I.

Ruhland Gets Post On Defense Council

Maj. B. C. Snow Outlines the Aims Of New D. C. Agency

Objectives of the newly formed District Council for Defense were outlined yesterday at the group's first official meeting.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director, and executive vice chairman of the council announced Health Officer George C. Ruhland would head a separate committee on health, which heretofore has been under Robert E. Bondy, welfare director.

As originally proposed Bondy headed the health, welfare and consumers interest committee of the council, but following protests by the health officer, the Commissioners decided to place him at the head of a separate health committee.

Objectives Outlined

Maj. Beverley C. Snow, assistant engineer commissioner, outlined the council's objectives as follows:

To provide means for full utilization of the powers and administrative organizations of the Federal and District Governments in the adjustment and coordination of programs and procedures in order that closely integrated administrative machinery may function with maximum speed and effectiveness.

To afford opportunity to private agencies to put their knowledge, skill and organized facilities at the service of the Nation.

To appraise properly, and assimilate the constructive value of individual offers of aid.

The executive vice chairman, Capt. Whithurst, is the administrative head of the council. He will transmit to committee chairman instructions from the commissioners in regard to procedure and assignment of duties developing upon the Commissioners in their cooperation with the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense.

The group will meet again next Wednesday at 3 p. m. in Capt. Whitehurst's office, and will submit names of committee members for appointment by the commissioners.

Members of the council present and the committees they represent follow: Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chairman, civil protection committee; Bondy, chairman, welfare and consumers interest committee; J. Blake Gordon, chairman, housing, works and facilities committee; Dr. Ruhland, chairman, health committee; Guy W. Pearson, chairman, human resources committee, and Philip Y. K. Howat, chairman, industrial resources and production committee.

U. S. May Trade Bombers to Britain for Engines

By the Associated Press

A trade to Great Britain of giant long-range bombers for plane engines was reported yesterday to be one of several new administration measures fast taking shape to reinforce British air might.

Release of a bomb-sight mechanism long jealously guarded by the Army and Navy also was said by authoritative sources to be under consideration, although there was no official confirmation of recurring reports that the Army and Navy had already agreed to permit Great Britain to obtain the sights. It was authoritatively hinted that only one of two such mechanisms developed exclusively by the United States figured in the latest negotiations.

May Get 40 Bombers

Application of President Roosevelt's rule-of-thumb policy, under which the United States would share new war material with Britain on approximately a 50-50 basis, might give the Royal Air Force 40 bombers of a current army order of 80. The last of the order is scheduled for delivery next month.

Another defense development was a reported plan to train pilots for Britain and Canada in this country. The reports said that 4,000 men would be given primary fight training this winter at commercial schools not handicapped by severe Canadian winters. Mr. Roosevelt has said there were no legal barriers to the procedure.

Advanced military flying would be confined, however, to Canada, center of the British Empire war pilot training scheme.

More Needed by U. S.

In announcing the rule of thumb policy last week, Mr. Roosevelt said it applied specifically to huge long-range Boeing bombers of a type developed exclusively for the Army and capable of carrying heavy bomb loads more than 3,000 miles.

The engines which the United States would obtain in the deal were included in current British orders with American manufacturers for more than 20,000 motors. They were said to be more needed for the moment by the expanding American Air Forces than by Britain.

On the basis of contract costs, 15 or 20 of the most powerful engines would approximate the $350,000 complete cost of the latest type 4-motor army bomber.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Yugoslavs Ready To Resist Axis, Says Ankara

Ankara, Nov. 13 (AP).—The official Turkish radio declared tonight that the German-Italian Axis is in a hole because of Italy's attack on Greece and that "Yugoslavia is planning to resist an attack if it comes."

It added, "Germany plus Italy is weaker than Germany alone. Germany knows this now. Berlin, after failing to win help from France and Spain is now trying to win aid from Russia."

The radio remarked that Greek resistance to Italy had not only "succeeded in raising Yugoslav morale but also has had a calming effect on Bulgaria."

A person high in Turkish government circles said that should any decision be taken at Berlin "unfavorable to Turkey, this country will not be taken unaware."

The same source added, "Any decision in favor of Turkey will be welcomed. Turkey has taken every measure regarding both possibilities and awaits developments without fear."

8,000 R. O. T. C. Men Face Call

For one reason or another the approximately 8,000 young men who soon will leave American colleges and universities with training as reserve officers are not only ready but, in many cases, eager to begin active military service.

This was disclosed yesterday in a survey made among the 114 representatives of Reserve Officers Training Corps in 79 schools at the opening session of the twenty-second annual convention of Scabbard and Blade, national honorary college military fraternity.

At the same time, it was learned at the War Department that consideration is being given to mustering the graduates into active service when they get their diplomas in June.

Brig. Gen. John N. Hester, in charge of reserve and R. O. T. C. training, said the collegians "stand a pretty good chance" of being called but that final decision depends upon the Army's officer need six months hence.

No convention delegate could be found who was not willing to go into service. Most of them were looking forward to the chance to accept responsibilities of an officer. All were expecting to be called as soon as they graduate either for a year's training or for an indefinite period. Their average age was 21.

J. H. Moore and J. L. Swofford, both of Spartanburg, S. C., and Wofford College, will reach military age one month before graduation.

Lacy Hall, of the University of Maryland, welcomed the prospect of military service because, he explained, "not every college graduate has a chance to take a responsible job." Robert Saum, a cadet lieutenant colonel and head of the university's Scabbard and Blade "company," said many of his classmates felt that they would stand a better chance of getting jobs when they have completed at least a year's service, as employers are hesitant about hiring men of military age who have not been trained.

J. O. Wilson, also of Wofford College, expressed the sentiment of many when he said:

"There aren't many jobs a fellow can step into right out of college at $185 a month."

Robert C. Hendon, administrative assistant at the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told delegates that the F. B. I. is increasing its force of agents and is "interested in receiving applications."

He said the F. B. I., though relentless in its prosecution of sabotage, was in no danger of becoming an American OGPU. He described the bureau as a "bulwark against such murderous organizations."

In response to a question about the existence of subversive groups on college campuses, Hendon said:

"You can bet your life subversive forces, just like the underworld, are looking for recruits among our youth."

The Navy's need for additional trained personnel was outlined by Lieut. Comdr. F. M. S. Quinby, of the Bureau of Navigation, who said:

"We are keeping ahead of our shipyards . . . we will not be caught short."

Rails Pledged 'to Serve' In Needs of Defense

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—The railroads of the United States were pledged today "to those whom they serve" to meet "the demands of commerce and the needs of national defense" in cooperation with each other and with the Government.

The pledge was given in a resolution adopted in closed session by the Association of American Railroads.

J. J. Pelley, president of the association, addressing 800 delegates from throughout the Nation, cited the breakdown of operations of the railroads in 1917 and their resultant Government operation as a war measure, but added:

Defense Sidelights

Atlantic Bases Called 'Steel Curtain'

New York, Nov. 13 (INS).—A 4,500-mile long "curtain of steel," to protect America's East coast while the fleet guards the country in the Pacific pending construction of the two-ocean Navy; has been provided by the new Atlantic and Caribbean naval bases, Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward declared today.

WOODWARD

The commandant of the Third Naval District told the Academy of Political Science that:

"Our present peace-time naval expansion, when completed—both regarding ships for our fleets and bases for servicing them—will have so vastly increased our naval strength that when and if war should come we will be well prepared to take and retain command of the sea against the fleet of any nation or combination of nations in either the Atlantic or Pacific, or in both oceans simultaneously."

Acquisition of the British bases in this hemisphere, the Admiral said, will prevent surprise attacks from large scale enemy naval or air forces to such extent that nothing short of an "all out" descent upon some part of this hemisphere would force withdrawal of the main American fleet from the Pacific. Regarding the Pacific, he said:

"Should we be able to obtain a base along the north-eastern coast of South America—where the distance to the potentially threatening west African Coast is shortest—and similarly be fortunate enough to secure additional bases in Equatorial Pacific waters—such as Galapagos and Cocos Islands—thus somewhat paralleling our Atlantic system, the American defense position, already strong, would be nearly impregnable to attack from either the Atlantic or Pacific.

Defense Program 'Year Ahead,' Knox Says

Boston, Nov. 13 (AP).—Secretary of Navy Frank Knox declared today that the national defense program was a "full year ahead of schedule" after he had inspected the Boston Navy Yard and shipbuilding plants in this area.

"In 1942 we will have many ships," he asserted in an interview. "We will be well underway then. In 1941 we are getting 26 new ships, including two battleships and one aircraft carrier, the Hornet."

The Secretary declared that in addition to the present coastal defenses Boston needed mobile defense at least 75 miles out to sea.

"By that," he added, "I mean that it needs a powerful fleet equipped with plenty of planes. This base could be bombed from 20,000 feet. Antiaircraft guns would do no good. We want to meet any enemy coming over."

New Bands to Strike Up for Selectives

Uncle Sam's "new" Army will have stirring martial music to whip up soldiers' spirits and less "fatigue" duty to drag it down.

A War Department announcement yesterday said that 24 new bands will be established under the expansion program and others shifted and redesignated to provide a better distribution of this time-proven morale builder.

Another announcement disclosed plans for employes of the National Youth Administration to take over many of the camp maintenance duties, permitting soldiers "to devote their full time to military training."

While no explanation was given of the phrase "special duty activities," to many enlisted men it promised relief from grass-cutting, painting, woodchopping and "policing" jobs.

Twenty-one of the new bands will be created at the 21 replacement centers—special recruit training camps—now being constructed. One of these is at nearby Fort Belvoir, Va. Each will be composed of 28 selective service trainees as playing members and four regulars as bandsmen-instructors.

Grange's Support Pledged in Defense

Syracuse, Nov. 13 (AP).—Pledging agriculture's support to the defense program, National Grange Master Louis J. Taber urged today development of American self-sufficiency in essential farm products.

"No nation is safe if it relies on foreign countries for essential commodities needed in its normal life and for defense use," Taber said in opening the seventy-fourth convention of the National Grange's nine-day conclave.

Agriculture might better serve national interests, he said, by more extensive experimentation and scientific pioneering of the now imported essential products which include oils, fats, vegetable fibers and wool.

"We should have more scientists and research workers," Taber declared, "on the job of finding methods of putting the farmer's idle acres and the Nation's idle dollars, and some labor, at work on these problems."

He suggested "incentive payments" to farmers to encourage production of plants yielding oils and starches.

Oil Industry Ready, Institute Told

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Col. T. H. Barton, president of the Lion Oil Refining Co. of El Dorado, Ark., reported today the petroleum industry was in "the best position of any basic industry" to serve the Nation in defense.

Col. Barton made the report before the American Petroleum Institute's twenty-first annual meeting, but cautioned against a "foolish complacency with respect to our ability to meet national needs."

"The backlog of crude reserves for the future reached this year a figure estimated at 18,500,000,000 barrels—three times greater than that of 1917," he said.

Trade Board Pays Tribute To Cabot Awards Winners

Board of Trade Hails Winners of Awards For Journalistic Work

The Washington Board of Trade devoted itself to being a good neighbor of the 20 Latin American republics last night as 1,000 of its members met to acclaim three journalists who won the Maria Moors Cabot prizes awarded annually to the ablest interpreters of the Pan American "way of life."

From Senator Enrique Santos, co-director of El Tiempo, Bogota, Columbia, one of the prize winners, the gathering in the Willard Hotel heard that there can be no "true union" of the Americas "unless an effort is made to bring about sincere rapprochement and to spread democratic ideals," that the nations of the Western Hemisphere "should be united by bonds, not of steel alone, which could be converted into chains, but of silk, which is as strong as any metal."

Trade Called a Bond

Rafael Hellodoro Valle, Mexico City correspondent for Latin American newspapers, another award recipient, told the meeting: "Nothing brings nations together so closely as commercial interests, nor does anything separate them farther . . . Diversities of language, of economic and cultural levels and of historic origins and injustices perpetrated by many politicians are to blame for the fact that in more than 100 years of independence we have not been able to form a common front."

The third prize winner, James I. Miller, vice president of the United Press Associations of Buenos Aires, Argentina, urged that to tighten the bonds of the Americas, Spanish should be taught in grade schools of the United States, as a "national second language"; that there should be a greater exchange of students, particularly on the part of this country; that tourist travel should be made more attractive and that United States port officials should be more courteous, and that this Nation should purchase more Latin-American products.

Donor Is Present

Also presented to the gathering was Godfrey Lowell Cabot, of Boston, donor of the prizes, an erect man who was an airplane pilot during the World War when he was in his 60's, and who read without spectacles a speech that urged "tireless vigilance" of American heritage, constant check on this Nation's rulers and moral as well as physical training for emergency.

W. J. McCambridge, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, declared that every businessman in Latin America knows that sooner or later American credits must end; that the one-way road of American trade must one day become jammed, and that eventually the United States must develop a market for Latin-American products.

Philip W. Bonsal, the State Department's acting chief of its American Republics Division, brought the meeting Secretary Hull's "appreciation of interest in this particular phase of United States' foreign policy."

Purpose Explained

Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism explained that the purpose of the gold medal prizes is to reward "not more than four journalists annually for their public services as interpreters and exponents of the American way of life."

"By American," Dean Ackerman added, "I mean the America of 21 republics including our America of 48 States."

Latin American newspapers, Dean Ackerman declared "unfortunately . . . are much more alive to the news of the Americas than are the newspapers of this country."

"Certainly," he continued, "they publish far more news from the United States each day than our newspapers print from the other American republics in a week." He pointed out that El Comercio in Lima, Peru, printed two pages of reports on award of the Cabot prizes last week and that "every word spoken here tonight will be transmitted to the newspapers of Latin America and millions of readers will be made aware of the significance of the occasion."

"In business as well as in education and journalism," Dean Ackerman concluded, "we should be conscious of the need of regarding our friendships not in the form of a fixed circle but rather as a centrifugal circle. If we can all work toward the enlargement of the circle of our American friendships we will make our contribution toward preservation of our American way of life."

Warns of Trade War

Describing himself as a "citizen of the Americas, deeply concerned over the future destiny of our greater fatherland," Senator Santos warned that a triumphant Germany, "in control of half of Europe," might make the Americas victim of a "dumping program of colossal proportions," of an "economic blitzkrieg whose results would be disastrous."

"After the conquest of markets," he continued, "would come political penetration, perhaps aided by native elements, seduced by apparent trade advantages and the mirage of false doctrines.

"Salesmen would be followed by gauleiters. And if we did not yield, sadly and resignedly, armed intervention would not be slow in arriving. These are not fantastic prophecies, but deductions drawn from reality and fro mfatal historic events. . . .

"It is no secret to any of you that commercial propaganda methods of German agents have always been superior, and that the conditions under which their goods are sold more favorable—longer credit, often better quality, unfailing and even exaggerated courtesy and efficiency.

"They use the same procedure with every one, great and small. That is not the way of the Frenchman or the Englishman, or the man from the United States, either. United States industry will have to face tomorrow the difficult problem of reducing the cost of its products, and the comparatively simple one of training its agents better and giving its clients more favorable terms, if it wishes to retain and increase its southern markets . . .

"Naturally, it is imperative not only that the United States defend its markets, but that it make possible the sale of our products at reproductive prices. The one is impossible without the other. The more we sell here at better prices, the more we shall buy and the better prices we shall pay."

Senator Santos joined Ackerman in decrying the failure of American newspapers to print more Latin-American news. Why is it, he asked, that United States papers devote so "many, many columns to puerile matters" and make "no effort to publish daily at least one column on information on Latin-American affairs, other than catastrophes?"

President Roosevelt's "good neighbor policy," Senator Santos said, has been enthusiastically received in Latin America "because it is not a mere phrase, but an index of fruitful relations between the United States and the other nations of this hemisphere."

Senor Valle told the gathering that United States relations with Latin America must be improved on the basis of "understanding, mutual respect, good will and cordiality."

He said that Spanish America hopes the new policy of the United States "may be the occasion for an improvement in its standard of living."

Heritage of All

"We must insist," he added, "that America shall be the heritage of all the American nations, which have a legitimate right to live in peace and to create new forms of human happiness."

Miller said he found it "amusing" that citizens of this Nation appear to have "discovered" South America and are as excited about it as "Queen Isabella on the return of Columbus."

Many South American countries, Miller said, "need constructive collaboration."

"Banquet speeches extolling the virtues of our western brand of democracy are not enough," he continued. "They prefer, gentlemen, that we give them orders for their surplus products—products that formerly went to Europe and now lie rotting on the docks for want of customers."

Miller, who has spent 22 years building up United Press news service in Latin-America, declared that "the only way the great buying power of our neighbor republics can be swung into the American orbit and retained there is by creation of a channel through which American money flows to buy Latin American goods."

Miller said that if the Argentine could send to the United States "only 3 per cent of our meat, a large measure of her economic difficulty would be solved."

Self-interest Deplored

McCambridge scored the United States as so self-interested "that we think of little but ourselves." He called attention to the fact that since 1918 the Associated Press, in opposition to government subsidized news agencies of Europe, has made a $10,000,000-a-year product available to Latin American newspapers.

The Germany propaganda machine, he said, is dumping hundreds of thousands of words a month into Latin America and is making pictures of German war successes available without charge to newspapers that can't afford a news service of any sort.

He charged that a great deal of news from the United States is changed before publication in Latin-America. The change, he said, depends upon the attitude of the Government or the publisher toward this country. Every labor strike in the United States, he said, is followed by reports from German agents that consumers in Latin-America no longer will be able to obtain products of the struck firm.

Alfred G. Neal addressed the gathering in behalf of the Community Chest campaign. Augustin G. Ribal, Cuban basso, sang. James E. Colliflower, president of the Board of Trade, introduced the speakers.

Your taste tells you that the smoke of slower-burning Camels gives you extra mildness, extra coolness, extra flavor.

Now Science tells you another important—and welcome—fact about Camel's slower burning.

Less nicotine—in the smoke! 28% less nicotine than the average of the other brands tested—in the smoke! Less than any of them—in the smoke! And it's the smoke that reaches you.

Mark up another advantage for slow burning—and for you!

Try Camels...the slower-burning cigarette...the cigarette with more mildness, more coolness, more flavor, and less nicotine in the smoke! And more smoking, too—as explained below, right.

● "SMOKING OUT" THE FACTS about nicotine. Experts, chemists analyze the smoke of 5 of the largest-selling brands...find that the smoke of slower-burning Camels contains less nicotine than any of the other brands tested.

By burning 25% slower than the average of the 4 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—Camels also give you a smoking plus equal, on the average, to

Unified Opposition

Following the election of 1932 and again in 1936 there was much talk of letting the Republican Party die and of building a new political opposition to the Roosevelt Administration. Today the comment on the future of the G. O. P. is taking a very different line. The party of Lincoln has suffered another setback, but there is now no reason to look for its demise in the near future.

In both 1932 and 1936 the Republican Party was crushed. Last week it was merely defeated, after making substantial gains in 1938. President Roosevelt's large majority in the Electoral College should not obscure the fact that the G. O. P. won many local victories. Nine States in the Democratic column, so far as the Presidential election is concerned, chose Republican Governors. And, while Mr. Roosevelt obtained about 54.5 per cent of the popular vote, the fact that nearly 22,000,000 ballots were cast for Wendell L. Willkie is sufficient to show the formidable character of the opposition.

So Republican leaders are talking of knitting their party more closely together instead of abandoning it. Mr. Willkie, in his address on Monday night, encouraged the organizations which supported him to continue in operation, although not under his name. He hopes to maintain a strong opposition party which, while aiding the Administration in building up our national defenses, will oppose vigorously the domestic policies on which the two parties disagree.

Certainly a more active and intelligent opposition party is much in demand. The Republicans can scarcely expect to lapse into disunity and confusion during non-election years and then suddenly bring forth a consistent program for campaign purposes. In the 1940 campaign the G. O. P. did have for its guidance a thought-provoking report from a program committee headed by the late Glenn Frank. But there is a wide gap between even a carefully prepared report and the development of actual legislative policies.

Because there has been no cohesion within the Republican Party in recent years, the legislative record of that organization has been particularly unimpressive. President Roosevelt effectively used that record to warn the Nation against entrusting control of the Government to the G. O. P. He had no difficulty in showing that some Republican legislators had played politics with national defense and that the party as a unit had not followed a unified or consistent policy.

Here is the real challenge to the Republican Party at the present time. As an opposition group, it needs effective and intelligent leadership. Mr. Willkie has properly stressed the importance of developing a unity of purpose designed to promote the national welfare without sacrificing basic principles for which that party stands. The degree of success which the G. O. P. achieves in thus coordinating its efforts as an opposition party may well measure its progress in the next four years.

Gabon

Halfway between Dakar and Cape Town on the west coast of Africa is the French colony of Gabon. Occupying an area of 93,000 square miles with a population of less than half a million its economic importance is slight. Nor does it possess the strategic importance of such an area as Senegal, whose principal city, Dakar, the "Free French" forces tried unsuccessfully to take over some time ago.

Nonetheless the occupation of Gabon by Gen. de Gaulle and his "Free French" forces cannot be dismised as of no importance. It removes from the control of Vichy the last remaining colony of French Equatorial Africa that was loyal to it. It also provides the British with an additional base of operations on the west coast of Africa, one which may help in the execution of a long-range encircling movement aimed at Italian Libya.

Capture of Gabon will tend further to weaken the hold which Vichy continues to have on various parts of the French Empire. Most important of all, it shows that the Frenchmen who have rallied to De Gaulle do not propose to let Great Britain fight their battles for them. On the contrary, they give indications by the assault on Libreville, the chief port of Gabon, of a desire actively to contribute to that joint victory which would mean the liberation of France no less than the salvation of Great Britain.

At Taranto

The Napoleon War had its Trafalgar, the World War its Battle of Jutland, following which the German fleet remained immobilized in home waters. To this roster of decisive actions at sea there may perhaps now be added the name of Taranto.

No great naval battle took place at or near this important naval base in the instep of the Italian boot. It was a battle of a new type, one in which the decision was won by air power. But by "affecting decisively the balance of naval power in the Mediterranean," to quote Winston Churchill, it well may have a vital bearing on the course of the war.

Since the sinking of the Bartolomeo Colleoni by the Australian cruiser Sydney several months ago, Mussoini has been extremely careful to keep the Italian fleet out of harm's way.

He may have been moved to adopt this unheroic course out of a healthy regard for Britain's naval prowess and the circumstance that Great Britain had assembled a large naval force in the Mediterranean.

He may have decided to husband Italy's naval strength to have at least one counter to throw into the scales on Italy's behalf, when, following the anticipated victory of the Axis, the winners sit down to carve up the British Empire. There is a possibility that the concentration of a large part of the Italian fleet at Taranto was designed to lure the British, who had been seeking a flight, into what the Italians may have hoped would be a rat-trap.

In any event the fact is plain that the Italian fleet has done little fighting during these five months. Now the fighting days of an important part of that fleet are over for some time and it may be forever.

On the night of November 11-12, British naval bombers carried out a devastating raid on Taranto. According to the announcement made by the British admiralty on the basis of photographic evidence, one Italian battleship of the Littorio class was left "badly down by the bows," a battleship of the Conte di Cavour class was beached with her stern up and her turret under water, while a third battleship was probably "severely damaged."

The effect of this disaster on Italy's fortunes can easily be imagined. The British will more definitely than ever be masters of the Mediterranean sea lanes. Having less to fear from Italian naval strength, they will be able to harass Italian supply lines to Libya with increasing boldness. And by putting the British in a position to release some of their surplus naval power from the Mediterranean to other theaters of action, the Taranto affair may, as Churchill informed the House of Commons, carry "with it reactions upon the naval situation in every corner of the globe."

Nor can the moral effects of the British coup be minimized. It will hearten the British, depress the Italians, who have never shown the slightest enthusiasm for the war, anyway, and help stiffen the backs of all the little nations lying in the path of the Axis steamroller. Coming at this time it may also not be without effect on the conversations taking place in Berlin between Premier Molotoff and the Nazi leaders.

Not often since he became premier half a year ago has Winston Churchill been the bearer of good tidings to the House of Commons. No wonder, then, that in announcing the successful British attack, the great British leader was all smiles and rubbed his hands in glee. To the famished he brought a feast.

More Blasts

Two months ago an explosion destroyed the Hercules powder plant at Kenvil, N. J., killing at least 39 and injuring more than a hundred others.

The cause of the disaster has never satisfactorily been established. It may have been carelessness. It may have been sabotage of the kind which was responsible for the great Black Tom and Kingsland explosions of 1916 and 1917. But the Kenvil blast was so destructive that it appears to have destroyed all clues to its possible origin.

At any rate, it is obvious that the greatest possible care must be exercised by the authorities to prevent recurrence of such disasters. Already the Kenvil explosion has been followed by the one which on Tuesday ripped through the Burton Powder Co. plant at Edinburg, Pa., killing three. The same day saw the plant of the United Railway Signal Corporation at Woodbridge, N. J., shaken by a terrific blast and an explosion at the Trojan Powder Co. plant near Allentown, Pa.

Now, as in the period following 1915, this Nation is viewing the rapid expansion of the munitions industry. Haste may again be the handmaiden of disaster. But the causes of the recent explosions must be gone into as fully as possible. Nothing can be taken for granted, certainly not the likelihood that these explosions may have been merely accidental.

A Hot Potato

The perennial difficulty of finding some Congressman to handle the District supply bill is just another manifestation of the absurd system by which Washington is governed. This year's experience differs little from the average. Chairman Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee has said that "nobody . . . wants the job" of leading the subcommittee on District finances, and that "it not only doesn't help a member back home . . . it usually hurts him."

Representative Mahon announced that he was considering the post, but previously, it was said, he had asked to be taken off the subcommittee altogether. Representative O'Neal refused to serve last year, and Representative Rabaut is in line for another assignment. The duty of deciding whether to accept would fall next on Representative Houston, a Kansan who joined the subcommittee in 1939.

There is no logical reason to expect that men from distant States will be interested in legislating for a community unfamiliar to them—a community which did not elect them and cannot show its gratitude for services performed. Every member of Congress owes a duty to his constituents, but he feels no such obligation to the voteless District. Representative Ross Collins, who resigned the District appropriations chairmanship in 1939 after painstaking efforts in behalf of Washington, repeatedly called the job "worse than the itch" and said it had been used against him by his political opponents.

Members of the House District Committee have had the same experience as Mr. Collins. Representative Norton found "a lot of headaches" in her six years as chairman. Congressman Kennedy worked tirelessly for the District, and when the committee bade him farewell at a special meeting, only Representative D'Alesandro dissented from the opinion that legislative work for the National Capital is a short cut to political suicide.

The unexplained mystery is why should Congressmen who find legislating in detail for the Capital City to be such a burden refuse year after year to create a local government that would be competent to pass ordinances and apportion funds among local departments under a Congressional charter?

Proof Of Amity

In designating Vice President-elect Henry A. Wallace as his personal representative at the inauguration of Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho as President of Mexico on December 1, President Roosevelt made a significant gesture of friendship to our neighbor republic to the south.

There is cumulative evidence that the bitterness of Mexico's recent Presidential campaign did not end with the election of Avila Camacho. Followers of his rival, Gen. Almazan, have refused to accept the results of the balloting as valid and during recent months rumors have been rife of an impending upheaval in that republic.

The Almazanistas have hoped to win the support of the United States. That they have failed to do so is evident by the Wallace appointment. The Cardenas government which will be succeeded by the Avila Camacho regime has given abundant evidence of a readiness to cooperate with this Nation in matters relating to hemispheric defense. And these manifestations of amity have met with an answering response in Washington.

Mr. Wallace will be a welcome visitor at Mexico City not only as the personal representative of President Roosevelt, who enjoys tremendous popularity throughout Latin America, but also on his own account. His successful efforts to master Spanish have won him the esteem of the peoples of the Spanish-American republics. The fact that Mr. Wallace can speak to the statesmen of our neighboring nation in their own tongue makes his selection for this mission particularly happy.

Journalistic Home Run

From the Fayetteville (N. C.) Observer

Business of expressing this department's and the paper's personal and public thanks and congratulations to Reporters Claude Jackson Gasque, jr., who, yesterday, with both editors abed in hospitals at opposite ends of Hay Street, proceeded to put out yesterday's issue of The Fayetteville Observer virtually singlehanded, insofar as the news content was concerned.

It is the Horatius-at-the-bridge act of daily journalism. The homer in the ninth with two down and the bases loaded, the touchdown from kickoff, something that happens, thank Heaven, but once in a lifetime—we hope.

Anyhow, there was the emergency and there was Gasque and the paper made the mails.

Parallel Interest

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The interest of the Axis powers in the results of the recent election was paralleled, during World War I, by a similar concern on the part of Germany and her allies over the outcome of the Presidential campaign of 1916. At that time, the rivals for our highest national office were President Wilson and Mr. Hughes. Mr. Hughes was favored by the Central Powers, for reasons made clear below.

In a communication of November 17, 1916, addressed to Secretary of State Lansing, Mr. Abram I. Elkus, the American Ambassador in Turkey, wrote the following:

The Germans, Austrians and Turks were greatly interested in the result of the election. Until Friday, November 10, it was reported that Hughes was elected and there was great rejoicing by the Germans particularly about this. The Turkish newspapers contained leading articles that Hughes might be "truly neutral," which they explained to be, prohibit sales of ammunition to England and permit Germany's submarine warfare to break England's unlawful blockade. Then on Friday came the news that election was in doubt, with chances in favor of the President. On Sunday, November 12, your telegram came informing us definitely of the result. (The Lansing Papers, Vol. I. p. 786.)

Of course, it is hoped that the subsequent historical events will not repeat themselves.

Neville Chamberlain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a constant reader of The Post I have always enjoyed its many excellent features, especially the editorial page. However, The Post of November 11 contained an editorial, "Neville Chamberlain," which to me sounds a flat note. It fails to discern and appreciate the real character of the man.

He hated war as do many thousands today, and knowing its terrible waste of men and materials, he fought constantly for peace, yet when war overtook him he was just as valiant in its prosecution. The Munich Pact should really go to his honor, for in it he gained one year for England's preparation.

During these conversations he was pitted against a wily, demoniacal man possessed with overpowering lust for power. Mr. Chamberlain was not inclined to diplomacy, his nature and training being too direct. He was simple in taste and manner, and his integrity beyond reproach.

While he was ridiculed and lampooned over the entire world, it made no difference with him. He performed his duty as he saw it, and died a sorrowful and disillusioned man.

He will pass into history, as one of England's great men.

On Decentralization

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The 1929-39 depression was especially severe upon congested populations in large cities. It has been suggested by industrial leaders, foremost among whom perhaps is Henry Ford, that much hardship in future economic depressions could be eliminated by decentralization of industry into smaller plants and factories located in farm communities.

With industry decentralized, workers in manufacturing plants could fall back upon the soil as a source of living during periods of unemployment.

While the proposal for decentralization has been advanced as a possible program for Government assistance, nothing much has been done about it.

Today a new reason has developed for decentralization of industry, namely, national defense. Industry broken up in small size units and scattered in rural areas, away from densely populated areas is less vulnerable to air attack than industry concentrated in large producing centers in densely populated areas.

Now, while the great American defense program is in comparative infancy, would be an excellent time to "kill two birds with one stone" by carrying out a complete program for decentralization of all industry, both defense industries and ordinary industries.

Working on the principle of making each economic area of the United States entirely independent of every other area, primarily as a matter of national defense, there could be accomplished a shifting of working populations into rural areas closer to the soil for greater economic stability in periods of depression.

With production thus brought closer to consumption and the producer of finished goods brought closer to the producer of raw materials, the whole of the economic arrangement of American people would be better prepared to meet economic dislocations or disturbances which may develop when peace is restored and employment in war industries is no longer necessary. WALTER A. BOWERS.
Chevy Chase, Md., Nov. 12.

Answers Mr. Russell

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Charles Edward Russell, former candidate for President of the United States on the Socialist ticket, writing in The Post of November 9, "thinks we have reverted to the monarchial principle."

He says the political philosopher of the future will wish to know why we "rejected" the Constitution in the recent election.

Have we done that?

Without a word of evidence or argument on this point the brilliant orator proceeds with the opinion: "The defeat (sic) I mean is in this, that it steadily and insidiously inculcates and nourishes the idea of 'let George do it.'"

But the Constitution provides for the election of one executive. Willkie (the only practical contender) was defeated—a rejection (defeat) of the Constitution! It is very confusing.

"The idea of hiring someone else to do what we ought to do ourselves" seems a singularly hazy concept, applied here by the former Socialist standard bearer and present champion of the Constitution. "Ourselves" cannot function as Chief Executive, constitutionally or otherwise.

And why does the venerable and scholarly Socialist prefer Mr. Willkie? The implication is clearer than any of his logic.

Future political philosophers will need more lucid guidance than Mr. Russell here provides; they will need a more careful ANALYST.
Washington, Nov. 12.

Thinks Capitalism Is Despised

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That commercial system which down through the years has undeniably provided people with more than any other, namely, the capitalistic system, has come to be despised by millions of people and many nations, principally because political leaders have some sort of magic method for providing "the more abundant life," without the hardships, sacrifices and competition essential for the preservation of free enterprise.

The people of our Nation, under the system of free enterprise, have received more of the necessities and luxuries than have people of other nations under any other commercial system.

That system is founded on an inflexible law of nature declaring that rewards shall be given those who courageously fight the battle to live. This may appear a cruel philosophy for living. However, some power greater than any man or group of men who have ever walked the face of this earth, so outlined that law, and that power provided a severe penalty for violation of that law. It cannot be repealed by any legislature or supreme court comprised of mere men.

Down through the centuries when nations have lived in accordance with this philosophy they have prospered and grown, but when they have attempted to alter it and encourage indolence, reward the unworthy, penalize thrift and industry for the benefit of parasites, they have decayed from within and fallen.

The mighty industry of our Nation was achieved because men were assured that if they entered the game of securing a livelihood, the winner would receive the prize; therefore businessmen gambled millions of hard earned and hard saved dollars merely on the prospect of possible success. Some of these "hit the jackpot," but many lost everything. Nevertheless as a result of all this we have been given the greatest production and distribution machine ever known to mankind, and we all participate in the fruit therefrom.

Young men struggled, saved and invested, thereby creating more jobs, and producing better and less expensive products. Our great industrialists did not hoard their earnings, but reinvested them thus giving more employment and even better and less expensive products. All this was made possible because there had always been given the assurance of protection for private property, a minimum of Government control and interference, plus assurance that the laurels would go the victor. Many governments give no assurance of protection for the industrious, thrifty and investing people, and our own has come too near to being in that classification.

Our citizens are being led to believe that they have nothing to worry about, insofar as their present and future security is concerned, regardless of their past, present and future conduct, because this security will be "provided." Men should be taught that there will be no provision for them except from their own industry, efficiency, thrift and wise investment, because this makes for greater effort, alertness, self-improvement and self-reliance. Men should be given responsibility for themselves and their families. They should not rely on others. Self-reliance gives birth to initiative, and without initiative there would be no action.

The present trend of thinking and teaching gives birth to weakness, which condition cries out for more reliance on others, which in turn creates weakness thus setting up a vicious circle which has but one ending, that being ultimate collapse, destruction and ruin for the individual and nation engulfed in the treacherous mesh.

W. P. HARGITT.

The Doctor And The Dictator

IN THOSE DAYS Panama was congested with Venezuelan exiles, or, more accurately, refugees. Vicente Gomez never exiled his enemies. He kept them at home, under lock and key, or he planted them beneath 6 feet of rich, tropical soil. The patriots who fled to Panama left Venezuela hurriedly, with the policia panting at their heels. Usually they escaped first to Trinidad or Curacao, and then took a boat to the Isthmus. Some of them were not so lucky. They had to struggle overland, through some of the most unpleasant jungles this side of equatorial Africa.

In Panama, just as soon as they cleared quarantine and customs, the refugees looked up the Doctor. He took them in and, if necessary, fed them and clothed them. Nearly always he lent them money.

The Doctor was an exile, himself. An indefinite number of years had dragged by since he fled Venezuela, but the memory was still bitter, and most of his waking hours were spent brooding upon it. You could say of him: vocation, professional exile; avocation, physician. No one knew the exact reasons for his flight, and even he was vague concerning them. He could reminisce for only a few minutes, and then he would be overwhelmed with such hatred for Gomez that he became incoherent.

The Doctor did very well in Panama. His offices filled the entire second floor of a building on Front Street, in Colon. These offices were a nightmare. They seem to have been decorated by a surrealist who was also a hypochrondriac. The walls were covered with horrendous charts displaying flamboyantly the progress of cancer, elephantiasis, cirrhosals, tropical rot, tumors, ulcers, gangrene. Perhaps the charts accounted for some of the Doctor's extensive practice; a patient exposed to them, although suffering from nothing worse than a hangover, would be in desperate need of a long course of treatment.

And the patients had plenty of time to look at the charts. The Doctor would be out on the balcony, haranguing the latest exiles from Venezuela. The exiles, usually apathetic and dazed, listened fascinated as the Doctor strode up and down the balcony, gesticulating and shouting. At night you could see the same pantomime; shadowy figures, dim lights, excited voices—a stage setting for a conspiracy. But there was no conspiracy. There was just talk.

The exiles never plotted a revolt. No matter how consuming their hatred of the dictator, they took it for granted, even the most fanatical of them, that as long as old Gomez was alive, revolt was futile. And so they waited for him to die. They waited year after year, and, morbidly, they listened to every report concerning his health. Because they wanted desperately to believe the worst, they swallowed all rumors. Gomez was dying of cancer: he had suffered a heart attack; he was paralyzed—they received such news gloatingly. But Gomez kept on living. It took more than wishful thinking to kill the old man. At 80, he was tougher than ever, and the exiles unconsciously changed the phrase, "when Gomez dies" to "if Gomez dies."

The Doctor was a nuisance to his neighbors. He buttonholed the less agile, and lectured them by the hour on the woes of Venezuela and the villainies of Don Vicente. There is nothing so boresome as perpetual indignation. And it never occurred to the Doctor that his impotent writhing, instead of belittling Gomez, exalted him. Yet, neither he nor any other of the dictator's enemies could take him lightly. Gomez wasn't a clown on horseback, like Hitler. You can still laugh at Hitler. No one ever thought of laughing at Gomez.

Well, at last the old man died. He died suddenly. For a while, the Venezuelans could scarcely believe the good news for which they had waited so long and so impatiently. Then there was hilarious rioting in Caracas, and the mobs jubilantly knocked over statues of the dictator and tried to lynch his minions.

The exiles in Panama, like their countrymen at home, were stunned at first. Nor did they return immediately to Venezuela. They were cautious. Even in death the dictator's shadow lay on them. But, at last, the exodus got under way and quickly gathered momentum. Soon they were all gone.

Everyone expected the Doctor to take the first boat. But he lingered on. More than any of his friends, he seemed unable to believe that his old enemy was actually dead. From force of habit, he still broke into diatribes, but he caught himself midway, confused at abusing a corpse. When he said, "Of course I will return to Venezuela," he recited the words perfunctorily. He was expected to speak them, and he spoke them. Likewise, when he praised the new regime, his manner was wooden, spiritless. He had never acquired the technique of praise, and he was too old to learn it. He was bewildered and lonesome. Hatred of Gomez had given purpose and excitement to his life. Now Gomez was dead.

The Doctor never went back. He stayed in Colon, with his gruesome charts, and his patients whom he still treated absent-mindedly. There were no more exiles to share his balcony. He sat there alone, every afternoon and evening, smoking a cigar, and staring dully out at the Caribbean.

J. I. Miller Discusses South America

Text of an address before the Washington Board of Trade last night by James I. Miller, vice president of the United Press Associations, who discussed our relations with South America:

IT IS a distinct honor to be with you tonight, and to be able to discuss with you a subject as vital and alive as our relations with South America.

I am particularly pleased, on this visit home, to observe a remarkably quickened interest in Latin America. Everywhere I go people who a few years ago had no interest in our neighbors to the south, now are hungry for information. So this is an excellent time for my visit home—I certainly am not at a loss for dinner table conversation.

I am pleased at this awakening on the part of the American public, and at the same time a bit amused. What strikes me most forcibly, coming back home, is the feeling manifest everywhere that South America has just been discovered. And I, almost a part of Latin America for 23 years, feel a bit as though I had just been discovered, too. Here I am, after devoting many happy years among peoples as highly cultured, and as alive politically as any in the world, suddenly besieged by North Americans as excited as Queen Isabella on the return of Columbus.

THIS IS amusing, but a bit surprising. I find two-page magazine advertisements bursting with news of a continent below the Panama Canal. Periodicals are full of articles discussing this or that—usually too much of this, and not enough of that. And after spending 23 years building up the United Press in every country south of Panama, I now wonder at special correspondents and writers who rush by air over the entire South American continent in two weeks, and return to the United States to tell all.

It is actually true that recently a newspaper syndicate sent a writer to visit every South American capital. He arrived in each of these great cities as dusk fell—and left the next day at dawn. Any articles written by such hasty observers contain unbelievable misstatements of fact.

But enough of that. These are merely first impressions on my return. From these impressions I gather one significant fact: there is in the United States now for the first time a hungry interest in the South. And where there is hunger, food can be secured.

But what food? I can suggest several articles which must go into any lasting diet. Our educators must begin to teach Spanish in the grade schools, as a national second language. At the present time, our children do not have an opportunity to study Spanish before high school or college, and then in most cases it is about on a par with that which is advertised: "You, too, can learn Spanish in ten easy lessons." Of what use is a program to bring the Americas closer together if we cannot understand each other? The sign language will not help.

IN LINE with this, there should be a greater exchange of students. There are great universities in South America. Today Latin-American students may be seen on the campuses of our American universities; but why are we not represented by more students in Buenos Aires, Bogota, Rio de Janeiro, Lima and Mexico City? The answer probably is that we have never given the suggestion much thought. Let us do so now.

It is also highly important that we encourage tourist travel by South Americans in North America. Great improvement has been made in steamship service between New York and South America in the past 20 years, but it does not yet adequately cater to the style of living to which the first-class South American traveler is accustomed: air-conditioned cabins, expansive suites, adequate room for an entourage, pursers and stewards with a fluent knowledge of Spanish and Portuguese. Likewise we must set up facilities to encourage middle-class South American tourists. The high cost of getting to the United States, and the cost of living while here, are a bar which keeps most South American travelers from us. A steak in a first-class New York hotel costs as much as a prime 6-month-old steer in Argentina. Foreign exchange also is unfavorable. Europe has looked realistically at the facts, and has offered tourist rates by which the traveler makes great savings in transportation, food and hotels when they come here.

WE MUST also reform our port-of-entry procedure, so that immigration officers will lean over backward to give a dignified welcome to our guests, and treat them as guests. We should at the very least consider an organization to take charge of South Americans once they step on our shores, make them feel at home from the moment they walk down the gangway or step from a plane, until they return again to their native land. This cordiality is extended to Latin Americans in Europe, and the comparison between treatment of South Americans in Europe and the United States is no compliment to us.

I find the mistaken impression here that tourist trade from South America has increased since the war began. That definitely is not true. Fewer tourists are coming now than before war started, despite the fact that South Americans can no longer travel in Europe. In the past six month 1,039 Argentines, Brazilians and Uruguayans have secured visas at United States Consulates for travel to the United States. That is just about the number which, under normal conditions, would be leaving Buenos Aires for Europe every three weeks. The fault lies not with the Latin Americans, but with ourselves, and it is a fault which can be remedied by an honest application of good neighborliness.

Simple details such as these can and will win the good will of the peoples of our 20 neighbors, but will not necessarily win their friendship. Every manufacturer and businessman who sells an honest product in South America adds something to the growth of friendly relations. But that, likewise, is not enough. Our diplomats are doing an excellent Government job in South America. Since President-elect Hoover's South American trip in 1928 and the subsequent withdrawal of troops from Nicaragua, the Government has increasingly done its part to promote neighborliness. Suspicions of imperialistic motives have been dissipated, and the present Administration of President Roosevelt has consistently demonstrated its desire to be a good neighbor.

Thus far we have had good neighbor conferences in which diplomats and statesmen have made glowing references to the ideals that we share in common. Much good has come from these meetings, in which the 21 republics have dedicated and rededicated themselves to the cause of Pan Americanism. Many resolutions have been crystallized into action. And I am proud to state that never before in South America has there been such a warmth of feeling toward the United States and its people as is shown at the present time.

SINCE it was our good fortune to develop materially faster than any nation on the face of the globe, South America now looks toward us for leadership in the present world-wide emergency. Many South American countries through force of circumstances brought on by the present war, need help and encouragement. They need constructive collaboration. And banquet speeches extolling the virtues of our western brand of democracy are not enough. They prefer, ladies and gentlemen, that we give them orders for their surplus products—products that formerly went to Europe and now lie rotting on the docks for want of customers. The most satisfactory method of establishing good will and gaining the confidence of a neighbor is to trade with him over the counter. Trade is the lifeblood of nations.

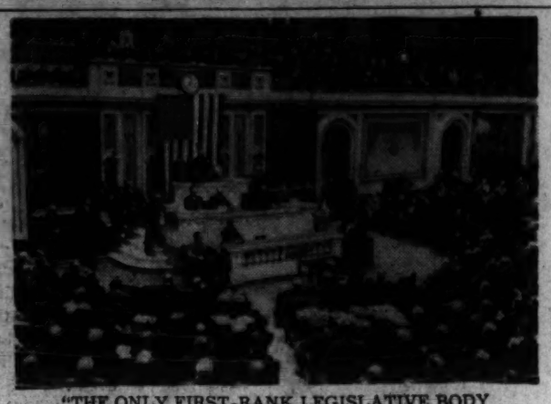
We can tell the people of Chile or Peru that we like them very much, that we are sympathetic to their aims and ideals, that we thank them for their thoughtfulness in buying our products. But that, again, is not enough. The only way the great buying power of our neighbor republics can be swung into the American orbit and retained there is by the creation of a channel through which American money flows to buy Latin-American goods.

When we talk of trade, we must of necessity talk of tariffs. It is not for me, the representative of an impartial news gathering organization like the United Press, to say whether the United States is justified in maintaining a 60 cents per bushel duty on linseed, an article the by-product of which is used in some form or other in every home in this land. Nor do I know if the best interests are served by barring Argentine fresh meat from this country. Argentine meat exports are less than 10 per cent of the meat and by-products consumed in the United States. If the Argentine could send to the United States only 3 per cent of our meat, a large measure of her economic difficulty would be solved. And I would like to ask: are more people benefited in the United States by exclusion of Argentine meat, or would more persons be benefited if the consumption of meat were increased which would result from Argentine imports? This is a problem we must solve if we are to make friends with South America, for with our policy of economic isolation, closer relations with many South American countries are extremely difficult.

SINCE COMING here I have often heard great concern expressed over the belief that European propaganda agencies are making tremendous strides in South America. The fact is that the importance of this propaganda has been tremendously exaggerated in the United States. While it is true that the European belligerents have left nothing undone to reach newspapers in South America with their propaganda, they have made little progress. Carl Crow, author and former United Press correspondent in China, is now in South America studying the effectiveness of European propaganda. In Brazil, where the European government-controlled agencies have probably exerted the greatest efforts, Mr. Crow finds that less than 7 per cent of the reading public depends on newspapers carrying the service of European propaganda agencies. The other 93 per cent goes right along getting its news from independent American news agencies. Mr. Crow points out that the American news agencies, with no thought of propaganda, carrying nothing but facts, have built up infinitely more confidences than the European propaganda agencies can ever hope to accomplish. Yet I find serious-minded persons in this country who feel that our Government should establish a propaganda bureau.

Naturally, any propaganda agency must tell only parts of the story. To put it in sports terms, a propaganda agency would score only the touchdowns made by its own team and only the fumbles on the other side. Our kind of press association reports the complete details, even if our side loses.

No good would be served by a Government agency sending to South America only what some bureau official thinks South Americans ought to know, or to withhold facts which he believes South America should not learn. In the long run, only a policy of absolute truthfulness will prevail, and this is becoming more apparent every day. Propaganda in the form of news would defeat its own purpose, and would arouse in the alert South American mind the very distrust which we would be attempting to avert.



"THE ONLY FIRST-RANK LEGISLATIVE BODY remaining in the world," Mark Sullivan calls the Congress of the United States. But, in recounting the story of the "X-Bill," he sounds a warning

History Of A Bill

By Mark Sullivan

Walter-Logan Measure Facing Death

THIS COLUMN recently wrote about the disappearance throughout the world of parliamentary government, legislative bodies—such as our own Congress. In country after country the legislative body has disappeared—has been supplanted by one-man, totalitarian government. The Congress of the United States is the only first-rank legislative body remaining in the world—even in England, parliamentary government is now limited.

Describing how—and why—legislative bodies disappear, and are supplanted by totalitarian government, this column wrote:

"Whenever this takes place, the final coming of totalitarian government is marked by disappearance of the legislative body, transfer of legislative power to the dictator. But, mark carefully, that is the final step. The early steps take place long before. And those early steps, often unnoticed, take place within the legislative body itself. The early steps consist of gradual lowering of vitality in the legislative body, gradual decline of pride on the part of individual members of the legislative body in their governmental function. The death of the legislative body takes place within the body itself; it takes place as the end of a long internal disease. The legislative body is not overtly slain by the dictator. The legislative body commits slow suicide, suicide by a kind of self-generated anemia."

THAT WAS written—and is here repeated—as a warning, a warning to the United States, a warning that here, in our own country, there is danger of what has happened in other countries. That was written as a plea to the Congress of the United States at this time, as a plea that it do not adjourn, that it remain in session if only for the sake of showing that, in the United States, the legislative body preserves its vitality, preserves its will to live, its will to function.

What has been said so far is in general terms. Let us be concrete. I shall illustrate by a condensed history of one bill—a bill which has been in Congress for two years and six months, which has never been finally acted upon, which is scheduled for final action next week—but which will die if Congress adjourns. This bill is the vivid illustration of the danger to legislative bodies, to our Congress, which lies in mere failure to function. What is said here is not a plea that this bill should be passed—not at all. It is solely a plea that the bill be acted upon. It is solely a plea that Congress show it has the vitality to exist and function, by remaining in session, to act upon this and other measures. In order that the question be confined to this single issue—that Congress should function, that it should act upon measures—I shall not give the name of the bill. Let us call it the "X bill."

THE X BILL was first brought forward, more than two and a half years ago. During April, 1938, prolonged hearings upon the bill were held by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee.

May 17, 1939, the bill was reported favorably to the Senate Judiciary Committe.

July, 1939, the bill came up in the Senate. It was passed by the Senate without dissenting vote.

Later, New Deal Senators Barkley and Minton asked reconsideration of the vote. It was assumed they spoke for the Administration. The Administration does not like the X bill, President Roosevelt in a press conference, has opposed it.

August 1, 1939, reconsideration was granted by the Senate "upon the understanding that the measure be taken up at some date early in the next session." The quoted words are from Leader Barkley. "Early in the next session" meant early in the present session, about last January or February. But the bill has not yet been acted upon by the Senate.

MEANWHILE, April 18, 1940, the House passed the bill by 282 to 97—a practically 3 to 1 majority. More than 1 out of every two Democrats voted for it. Practically all Republicans voted for it. Obviousy the bill was popular.

In the Senate, consideration of the bill was deferred again and again. Among other pleas, Senator Barkley said that a commission appointed by the Attorney General was studying the bill. Finally, under pressure from friends of the bill, Senator Barkley agreed that the bill should be called up November 18 (next week) and that he would cooperate in bringing about final action.

That is the legislative situation today. Undoubtedly Senator Barkley will live up to his promise to bring the bill up for action November 18. But, if Congress adjourns, the bill will be dead. The bill will have died through sheer lack of the will to function on the part of Congress.

The actual name of the "X bill" is Walter-Logan bill. Its purpose, briefly, is to provide judicial appeal for actions and orders of the executive branch of the Government.

The Willkies At Home

Mr. Willkie—Well, it's all over.

Mrs. Willkie—Am I glad! I don't want to see any more eggs for four years.

Mr. Willkie—It was a pretty tough campaign, wasn't it?

Mrs. Willkie—Campaign? I thought it was a retake of the Battle of Gettysburg.

Mr. Willkie—It must have been particularly hard on you, dear. You were certainly game making all those trips with me.

Mrs. Willkie—Nobody can ever tell me again that Mrs. Roosevelt is the champion traveler.

Mr. Willkie—Now that it's all over, it was worth it, wasn't it?

Mrs. Willkie—I won't know until my doctors go over me and bring in a final report. How do you feel?

Mr. Willkie—I feel like sleeping for years.

Mrs. Willkie—Well, there's nothing to stop you.

Mrs. Willkie—You certainly surprised me in this campaign.

Mr. Willkie—How?

Mrs. Willkie—I never knew you could talk so long without stopping. If I had even suspected it before I would have been frightened stiff.

Mr. Willkie—I didn't know I could do it either. How did you like my speeches?

Mrs. Willkie—That's one question no man, even a President, should ask his own wife.

Mr. Willkie—Oh, come, now, they weren't so bad, were they?

Mrs. Willkie—After all, honey, they weren't throwing those tomatoes at ME!

Mr. Willkie—What a relief it is to travel around now and not have to duck anything!

Mrs. Willkie—You're telling me! Well, all levity aside, dear, you put up a glorious battle and I never was more proud of you in my life.

Mr. Willkie—After all, with all respect to what the voters say, it's what a man's wife says that is the most important. I'm sorry, of course, to have lost the election. It would have been a great kick to me to know you were the First Lady of the Land.

Mrs. Willkie—There were times when I was afraid of that.

Mr. Willkie—Don't tell me you are just as well satisfied that you are not the First Lady.

Mrs. Willkie—I certainly am. After all, I would have had all the bother of moving, decorating the White House and saying "No" every few minutes.

Mr. Willkie—Saying "no" to whom?

Mrs. Willkie—To syndicates asking me if I'd like to write a diary.

Mr. Willkie—Well, now that it's over, I think I'll take you on a vacation where you can get a well-earned rest, regardless of expense.

Mrs. Willkie—You THINK!

Mr. Willkie's Speech On The Function Of The Opposition

ON MONDAY EVENING Mr. Willkie was concerned with a question to which as yet no one has ever found a really satisfactory answer. It is how under our political arrangements an ex-President or an ex-candidate for President is to play an effective part in public life. For one of the greatest defects of our political system, perhaps its greatest weakness as compared with the parliamentary system, is that there is no recognized and responsible and useful role provided for men who, as President, have acquired invaluable experience in high office or, as candidates, have earned the intense loyalty of an important part of the electorate.

Under the parliamentary system men like ex-President Hoover, men like Al Smith and Wendell Willkie, continue to take a normal part in the daily task of governing the country. For they remain members of the legislature and they have a recognized place in the councils and the acts of their party. Thus their experience counts, and, what is no less important, they themselves continue to grow in experience by making responsible and practical decisions on the real issues of their time. But under our system they become outsiders—having neither office, nor continued and first-hand access to the affairs of government, nor even a definite and responsible relationship to the elected representatives from their own party. This is a most unsatisfactory state of affairs. It means that during the long four years interval between one election and the next national convention the policies of the opposition party are determined largely by the local views and interests of the Senators and Representatives. It means that the man who was the national leader, as President or as candidate, is relegated to the role of a back-seat driver.

IF MR. WILLKIE can find the answer to this difficulty, he may set a precedent that will be a lasting contribution to the American political system. But a problem which none of his predecessors has known how to solve is not likely to be solved one week after a bitter election, and it was evident, it seems to me, from Mr. Willkie's speech that he is puzzled and troubled by the problem and that he has not yet had the leisure to consider it thoroughly.

Thus again and again he referred to "the minority" of 22,000,000 who voted for him, but he omitted, surely not by mere oversight, to mention the name of the Republican Party, of which he was the nominee. He referred also to the principles for which he had campaigned, and announced a five-point economic program which "we can offer." Yet though these recommendations as to taxes and appropriations have first to be adopted by the Republican Senators and Representatives before they can be translated from generalities into a legislative program, Mr. Willkie never once referred to the elected Representatives of the Republican Party in the Congress of the United States. Thus, although he insisted, quite rightly, that "ours is a two-party system," he never professed to speak for the party to which he belongs and never reminded his listeners that the constitutional organ of "the opposition" is the Republican representation in Congress.

MR. WILLKIE'S AVOIDANCE of a discussion of these basic realities of the two-party system was due presumably to the unfortunate fact that no man in his position has any recognized role in the party system. Mr. Willkie could not know on Monday evening whether he is able to speak for and is able to lead the Republican opposition in Congress. Even this summer, when he was the national candidate of the party, he could not speak for and could not lead his party in Congress. He must have even greater doubts now whether he can lead his party as a political organization.

As a matter of fact, he cannot lead it. He can only influence it more or less depending upon whether his personal prestige grows or diminishes. No doubt he realizes this, and this is the reason, it would seem, why on Monday evening he presented himself not as the official leader of the Republican Party but as the spokesman of "a minority" of 22,000,000 citizens who are "to express yourselves freely and openly to those who represent you in your State and National Government." If this conception of a solid "minority of 22,000,000" led by a private citizen and expressing itself to and not through its representatives is seriously meant, and is not, as is most likely, something left over from the fevers of the campaign, it is to say the least a most unhappy conception.

FOR ONE THING, and most importantly, the 22,000,000 who voted for Mr. Willkie are no more "the minority" than are the 27,000,000 who voted for Mr. Roosevelt "the majority." They are all American citizens with absolutely equal rights and any attempt to make them conscious of themselves as a separated part of the population is inadmissible under the American conception of government. The Republican Party is the minority party in that it did not elect the President or as many Representatives and Senators as did the Democratic Party. But the people who voted the Republican ticket are not "a minority"; they are an indistinguishable part of the Nation.

WENDELL WILLKIE

MOREOVER, now that the campaign is over, the time has come to forget the hot rhetoric and the excited slogans and to take once more a cool and matter-of-fact view of politics. For Mr. Willkie will not solve the difficult problem of how to play an effective part in public life by nursing the illusion that there was anything very extraordinary about the campaign which he conducted. He must not be taken in by those who tell him that he polled the largest vote ever polled by a Republican candidate. For the cold fact is that Mr. Roosevelt polled the largest vote, unless 1936 was slightly larger, ever polled by any man who ever ran for public office in this country. It would be a calamity if Mr. Roosevelt were to be impressed by the size of his vote and it will be unfortunate if Mr. Willkie is impressed by the size of his vote.

As a matter of fact, and everyone knows it who follows elections, what is significant is not the absolute number of votes polled but the proportion of the vote cast for each candidate. By this measure Mr. Willkie was not quite so strong as Bryan in 1896 and in 1900, and just about as strong as Bryan in 1908. He was considerably weaker than Mr. Hughes in 1916 and a little but not immensely stronger than Al Smith in 1928 and than Mr. Hoover in 1932; out of each hundred voters he had four or five more than Hoover and Smith when they were defeated. Moreover, it will be well to remember when tempted to take too big a view of the "22,000,000" that Governor Landon had nearly 17,000,000 votes and that they almost certainly represent the irreducible Republican minimum. Finally, there are the best of reasons, based not only on the Gallup polls but on actual Congressional elections in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Iowa and Nebraska for believing that the Republican proportion of the vote in the early months of 1940 was just about what it was in the November election—that is about 45 per cent. That the Republican proportion would have been smaller if Mr. Willkie had not been nominated seems to me highly probable. But, of course, it cannot be proved. But there is no evidence that the campaign did more than arrest the Republican decline caused by the war and to recover what the Republicans were losing in May and June and July.

IT WILL FOLLOW, I think, that Mr. Willkie's role in public life will depend not upon the campaign which has just ended or upon the notion that he is the leader of a mass of 22,000,000 but upon what he will be able to contribute to the grave issues which confront the Nation. Influence is a perishable commodity which has to be renewed by earning it continually, except in those rare cases where a man has rendered such distinguished service to his country that the people will always, thereafter, look to him for guidance. Therefore, though one must respect Mr. Willkie's decision to remain out of the public service, one may hope that the decision is not irrevocable. It is not the kind of decision which any man ought to make irrevocably while the cheers and boos of an election campaign are still ringing in his ears.

And there is ground for thinking that the decision may not be irrevocable because the reasons which Mr. Willkie set forth on Monday evening are such poor reasons. He said that a Republican could not take a high post in a Democratic administration, though liberals and labor men participate in the Churchill government. In England, he said, the members of the cabinet are "a committee of equals wherein the prime minister is chairman, a lofty chairman and yet but a chairman." In America, on the other hand, Republicans in a Democratic administration "must concur in the President's convictions. If they do not, they have no alternative except to resign." Mr. Willkie may have good reasons for not entering the Administration, but what he said about it is no reason at all. For when a member of the British government does not concur in the acts of the prime minister, as for example Mr. Duff Cooper after the Munich agreement, what is his alternative? It is to resign. Mr. Duff Cooper may have been "the equal" of Prime Minister Chamberlain but Mr. Duff Cooper, not concurring, resigned. So while it may be true that Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt could not work together, the difficulty is not in our constitutional system but in their temperaments. Ex-President Taft took a notable part in the second Wilson administration and nobody supposed that any great principles were being violated.

FINALLY, there was left out of Mr. Willkie's speech any reference to one of the greatest of all the functions of an opposition leader in a time of national emergency. That is the function, in addition to criticizing and opposing, of consulting and concurring. It is an indispensable function, especially in the conduct of foreign affairs. For they cannot be conducted successfully unless before making important decisions the Administration can consult with the responsible leaders of the opposition, lay the facts before them, and shape its decision by agreement with them. This was exemplified in the case of the destroyer-bases transaction last summer when, if consultation and agreement had been possible between the President and Mr. Willkie, this urgent matter could certainly have been handled more easily and perhaps even, if Mr. Willkie had been able to speak for his party, by consulting Congress.

All of which goes to show that the last word has not yet been said on the functions of the opposition party in the days to come.

A Rip-Roaring General

ONE SUPERB character roars through all the 461 lively pages of Robert Wilder's novel, "God Has a Long Face" (Putnam, $2.50). It is "Gen." Basil Wallis Burgoyne, a Cincinnati boy, who couldn't wait to be mustered out of the Union Army after Appomattox, but, deserting, brawled and wenched his way across the continent, married in Savannah and set himself up as "one of Lee's generals," and a booster, in Dade, Fla.

He was a big man, 6 feet 6, and he liked to do things in a big way. "He sure talks big and he surer than God drinks big," a neighbor said of him, and added, "Come to think of it, I wouldn't be a damn bit surprised if he was as big as he drinks and talks." He built big houses, and he rode like a galloping fury up and down the west coast of Florida, rousing lazier folk to something of his own excited faith in the country and in himself. Fortunately, he made an early alliance with Bohannon Kirby, a lean, hardened son of Georgia, who filled in some of the gaps over which the general leaped.

Mr. Wilder, who writes a daily column for the New York Sun in his spare moments, packs the stuff for a dozen novels into this story, and some of it he squanders recklessly. He hints at another full novel's worth in Burgoyne's five years of wandering after the Civil War, but he drops them with a hint. He takes two of the general's sons off to an orange grove, then pitches them into the Spanish War and loses them. He throws in a romance with a Spanish girl for the third son, then turns the headstrong lad into a prig and concentrates on the roistering, liquorous, lecherous decline and fall of this prig's son, who had a little of his grandfather's talent for liquor, but none of the general's genius for sound, hard living.

Strange Bedfellows

THE COLLABORATION of Harold Ickes and Harry Hopkins with Kelly and Hague in the late campaign of the party of humanity has been noted and approved by a slight plurality, along with the mutuality of Fiorello LaGuardia and the once abhorrent Mr. Flynn. These associations were equally embarrassing to all concerned, and the Little Flower's shame was such that in a moment of angry self-reproach he snatched his own conscience by the necktie and tried to throttle the small, still voice.

Yet, for the record, it should be noted that there were other alliances hardly less incongruous and that we seem to be developing here, in our two-party system, a condition somewhat like that which existed in France until Hitler came along and unified the funny race.

Of those who favored the candidacy of Wendell Willkie this voter, at least, has come to realize since the campaign ended that he found himself yanking at the covers in the company of some types with whom he would not be found dead, much less in bed. It was unpleasant to receive letters of encouragement from malignant anti-Semitics and to be called "one of us" by smug and stuffy individuals who obviously never did a lick of work in their lives and have strong ideas about the lower classes, indorsing my work "against unions."

ONE CRAZY MAN who reads Hitler and Streicher, and doubtless sleeps with a gun under his pillow, wrote to warn me of some foul international plot against my life and to assure me that my assassination would be avenged by the knights of some secret order. I had given no indication of any sympathy with his hallucinations, but he was against Roosevelt as a "tool" of the devils who dance in his own head, and therefore favored Roosevelt's opponents, including me.

A file of this correspondence, which I threw away from day to day, would be an interesting historical keepsake, but I am no librarian, and posterity probably will be better off without it.

But the lines crossed and recrossed in a great tangle of confused animosities and purposes which must have placed many others in very uncomfortable society.

SEVERAL CATHOLIC clergymen came out for Willkie, and thus found themselves on the same side with John L. Lewis, who, unquestionably, now, as before, has the support of the Communist element in the C. I. O. If the Communists voted for Willkie they were ingrates, for they owed much to the New Deal, and if they didn't they let down the man who is and has been their man in the American labor movement, although he is not a Communist but only a free-style dictator himself.

On the Roosevelt side there were strong supporters who had defended Lewis against the charge of dictatorship and association with the bolos, but now denounced him and hollered loud that the Communists were for Willkie because Lewis was. One day Lewis was all right, and it was dirty Girdler propaganda to say that he had any truck with the Muscovites, but when he went over to Willkie he was a traitor and a tool of Big Joe.

IT WAS NOT PLEASANT to be on John L. Lewis' side, for my suspicions have been confirmed since, namely, that he had to go with the Communists who are his strength, who were quitting Roosevelt because the President armed for war or defense, contrary to the party line from Moscow. If the Communists were on Willkie's side they were not only ingrates but, much worse, were temporarily at least, comrades of the middle class and big and little business and many of the religious people and the anti-Semites, who, to a man, judging by their propaganda, must have voted against the President.

Then, in New York, we discovered on the platform at one of the President's rallies Mr. Generoso Pope, the publisher of the ripest and most profitable Italian press in the United States, a political padrone of the Italian Duce over thousands of Americans of Italian descent, and one who has worn with juvenile pride the honors received from the commander in chief of the fearless invincibles of Guadalajara and Greece. Mr. Pope is a Tammany man, as well as a Mussolini man, and in a terrible hour he found it necessary to indorse for a third term the man who accused his Duce of stabbing a stricken neighbor in the back.

It is going to take some time to comb ourselves out.

'Girls in Blue' Are Families' Friends

By Barry Sullivan
Post Staff Writer

Since being born is a baby's greatest health hazard, the "girls in blue" of the Instructing Nurse Society try to give pre-natal care in preparation for the great event.

By the time the new Washingtonian makes his arrival, the nurse usually has become an old family friend. For she has helped with housework, helped map out the family budget on limited income and done her best to improve health conditions where changes were needed.

Many of the 68 nurses working in the Capital are called in acute illnesses only to find that help of other social service agencies is needed.

For example, one of the girls in blue was called to care for 10-year-old Raymond, who had been excluded from school while suffering from highly contagious impetigo. While carrying out the physician's orders, she noticed that Harvey, 5, was deaf. He was constantly "teased and tormented" by the other children in the family of five and had become almost unmanageable.

What did this nurse do? She arranged for the boy to be admitted to special classes for the deaf at Kendall Green. Harvey's new teachers found him intelligent and he became again a normal, happy boy.

Another nurse of the society, which receives approximately $121,320 annually from the Community Chest, was called to look after 7-year-old Rolland, who was suffering from a serious throat and mouth infection. Under a doctor's orders she taught Rolland's mother to take care of him and arranged for clinical care at Children's Hospital. Subsequently, she arranged for him to have his tonsils and adenoids removed when he was well enough to undergo the operation.

Nearly two-thirds of the budget for the society come from the Community Chest. Other sources of income payments for services, either complete or partial, by patients, yearly gifts and endowment funds.

"The payments by patients are important," says Miss Gertrude Bowling, executive director, "because they help patients keep their self-respect. We have found self-respect essential to physical well-being ahd ultimate self-support."

In going about her district, which is similar to the "beat" of the old-time policeman, the I. V. N. S. nurse may, and probably will, run into a variety of illnesses. In a day her assignments may range from "colds, fever, sore throat, bruised heel, mumps and measles" to "broken leg, cancer, pregnancy, kidney trouble, and pain in the abdomen." The last, Miss Bowling points out, could be anything from plain, old stomachache to appendicits.

Producer-Star of Ice Follies Collects Skates as Hobby

Each of the star ice skaters who skim about at the Ice Follies of 1941 in Riverside Stadium pays $120 per year for skates. Boots and skates are individually fitted and both must be kept in tip-top condition at all times.

A hobby indulged in by Eddie Shipstad, producer-star of the show, is collecting ice skates from all periods of history. He has a collection of more than 20 pairs, some of them 100 years old.

According to Shipstad, shin bones of animals were the first ice skates. "In primitive times," he said, "those bones were tied to the feet and skaters propelled themselves across the ice by means of a spiked came.

"Invention of iron and steel blades made use of stick unnecessary, as skaters could then, through use of the cutting edges of the blades, push off with one foot and glide on the other."

Bride of Month Walks 'In Air' On Ice Stilts

MANY a bride of one month is still walking on air, but there's one in town now who actually is skating on stilts.

Phyllis Legg

She's Phyllis Rebholz, of the Ice Follies, and she was married a month ago to Harris Legg, stunt skater with the same show. They do the difficult stilt act together in the Wooden Soldiers number. As the world's only woman stilt-skater, Phyllis admits she was scared to death the first time she tried it. "But apparently I did better than Harris expected, and we decided to work up an act. We rehearsed every night after the show—kept the watchmen up till all hours." The 20-inch stilts, patent-by Legg, are attached just below the skater's knee and are hinged at the ankle to allow greater freedom. They allow so much freedom, in fact, Legg does not recommend them to the amateur.

Like most of the troupe Mrs. Legg is from Minnesota; her husband is Canadian. Both trace their agility on ice to the fact that they have skated since childhood, but deny that this should discourage adult beginners. "Buy properly-fitted shoes that hug your heel, lace the strings firmly, practice faithfully in spite of tumbles, and you'll be a skater within a year," they promise.

POSTMORTEM—During the hectic pre-election days a stout, gray-haired woman was seen around town wearing a button marked, "If I were 21 I'd vote for Willkie" . . . Three women and a Roosevelt banner marched up to Republican headquarters toward midnight November 5 trailing some 30 yards of black crepe, which obviously was intended for decorative purposes. They got as far as the entrance when they were stopped short by a policeman, waggling a warning finger.

Some women like to chat at the meat counter; others apparently don't. A friendly soul with a sharp ear heard the woman ahead of her order some beef, pork and veal ground together. "That sounds interesting," she chirped; "what's it for?" The other customer, in a less cheerful mood, said briefly: "My husband. He eats it raw."

REPARTEE—A reporter interviewing one of the Ecuadorean delegates to the Inter-American Commission of Women asked, "How tall are you, Senora de Levi?" . . . "Tall? Tall?" the petite woman asked in bewilderment. Finally she understood the question and replied smilingly, "I do not know, but I have a BEEG soul."

Britain Free Despite War, Says Miss Walters

Holder of Rose Sidgwick Fellowship Scoffs at Reports That Democracy In England Is on the Decline

By Jessie Ash Arndt

England, an armed camp with every citizen prepared to do his part in defense of the freedom his country represents to him, was pictured yesterday by Marjorie Walters, holder of the Rose Sidgwick Memorial Fellowship, awarded by the British Association of University Women and administered by the American Association. She opposed the reported statement of United States Ambassador Joseph Kennedy that the war has reduced England to national socialism. Kennedy has declared that he was misunderstood in connection with the published interview.

Miss Walters, who arrived in this country only a few weeks ago and was here yesterday from Bryn Mawr College, where she is now studying, asserted there was freedom of speech; freedom to take issue with government policies—"and just let anyone in the government suggest making peace with the Fascists," she said; "the people would give the answer."

Miss Walters quoted a coal miner's approving remark to her about Churchill: "He's a bloody piece of British oak, he is; he doesn't mind who's in the government just so he's British."

The government today represents the whole united people, she said. Once, in England only a few people took thought for the welfare of their neighbors. Now everybody does. Everyone is planting gardens and, if there is an extra cabbage, it is put on the neighbor's fence. Housewives realize their part is as important as the soldier's and they are "bottling" fruit and vegetables and following wartime menus with a will.

Miss Walters completed her doctorate at Oxford University while giving volunteer service two days a week, on six-hour shifts as a telephone operator for the A. R. P. (Air Raid Precaution) system.

"This entire service is volunteer and each area has organized itself. Every inch of the country is accounted for," she said.

Volunteers assigned as air raid wardens with certain sections under them have been trained for proficiency in handling various phases of emergency connected with the raids. Each has organized his deputies by streets. Day and night there are groups on guard; maps show where ambulances, fire squads and other services are located, she asserted. The communication system is perfected so that warnings are sent ahead as raids are coming, giving people time to take shelter. Members of the Civilian Defense Service go on duty when the sirens sound, warning other citizens to seek shelter, Miss Walters continued. The Local Defense Volunteers, which Hitler calls the "broomstick army," supplements the antiaircraft forces on guard for parachutists, she said.

She described the seashore resorts where some of the coast defenses are. "Dutch soldiers, Czechs, French and Polish are in no way mercenaries of Great Britain. They are not fighting for us but for their own countries," she declared. "One look at them and you know they are not conquered peoples. They have our great respect."

Of the Canadians, the Australians and New Zealanders, she said, "we almost worship them."

Clarence Hewes Is Host at Party For Kitty Hill and Ellen Flowerree

Debutante Fete Grows and Grows Until All Ages Are Represented; Mrs. Eldridge Jordan Among Guests

In typical Washington fashion, young people, their parents, uncles and aunts milled about happily together at the party given yesterday afternoon by Clarence Hewes. Planned primarily as a debutante party, it grew and grew until all ages were represented.

Sharing honors were Miss Kitty Hill, debutante daughter of Mrs. Hiram Bingham, and the host's niece, Miss Ellen Flowerree. The latter made her home with her uncle last winter and has just returned from a stay of several months with her family in New Orleans to be with Mr. Hewes for the winter.

Receiving with Mr. Hewes in front of the fireplace in the drawing room, the two girls wore floor-length dresses and each had a corsage of gardenias. Miss Hill's frock was of black velvet with a bodice of white lace, fashioned with short sleeves, and Miss Flowerree's dress had a full skirt and a black top.

Chinese tea—and Mr. Hewes is famous for his delicious brand—and punch were served in the dining room. Presiding during the afternoon were Mrs. Bingham, who topped off her black velvet dress with a tiny hat of red ostrich feathers; Mrs. Julian Chetwynd, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, in green with a matching hat; Mrs. Buchanan Merryman and Mrs. Kenna Elkins. Small yellow chrysanthemums in a silver bowl centered the table.

Mrs. Jordan To Have Guest

Mrs. Eldridge Jordan was telling friends that she will be joined shortly by her niece, Miss Virginia Peters Salmon. The latter is motoring down from New York with Mrs. Blaise de Sibour, who has decided to make her home in Washington after all this winter.

Mme. van Kaathoven, in brown with a hip-length fur jacket, paused on her way out to greet the vom Rath twins. Mrs. Wallach Merriam, without whom no debutante party would be complete, sat in a comfortable chair and watched the proceedings.

Mrs. Emmons Smith exchanged dog notes with Pendleton Hogan, while Mrs. John Caswell joined in. Mrs. Caswell's hat had a tiny brim of blue feathers.

Mme. Espil wore a silver fox cape with her black frock. Her daughter, Miss Louise Stillwell, was also present, dressed in black.

Many Bachelors In Group

Others seen here and there: Mrs. Waggaman Pulver, with a red carnation pinned to her fur jacket . . . Mrs. George T. Pettingill, in bright red . . . Mrs. William T. Mann and Mrs. Sims Snow making the rounds together . . . Miss Eleanor Flood, surrounded by beaux . . . Col. William Shipp, who will entertain at cocktails Sunday afternoon . . . Nathan Bartlett, with an attractive visitor from Houston, Tex. . . . Mrs. William Lacy pausing for a word with Mrs. Chetwynd . . . Leone Fumasoni Biondi coming in near the end of the party . . . Maj. Fred Roy, Jack Segar, and Fred Mechlin among the "extra men" . . . Miss Diana Rowland, in biege wool with furs . . . Edward Gardiner chatting with Randall Hagner . . . and many, many more.

War Produces Better Gloves for American Women

That little "bootstrap" that helps with the pull-on is a new note in the casual finger-free gloves (shown above) that combine goatskin and pigskin. In black, brown and navy they are good for town wear; in ginger and cream for sports dates

New Soft Leathers Wear Longer, Cost Less, and Hold Color

Pointers on Buying Various Types Are Given; Good Skins Are Supple, Strong And Lustrous; Easy Fit Is Advised

No use to worry any more because your gloves won't bear the "Made in France," or "Made in Belgium" label. Better and less expensive gloves of the "Made in America" variety are the latest news from the glove market.

American glove makers, the Associated Press reports, have swung into the fashion ring and have emerged with leathers they claim look and wear as well as those from across the Atlantic and cost from 10 to 20 per cent less.

Now you can buy American gloves—black "doeskin," brown pigskin to match your shoe trim and peacock blue suede to match your hat feather—and expect to find them supple after washing and with no streaks on hands or clothes.

Years of Work

This is the result of years of work galvanized into new action by the war.

Here are some pointers on gloves and tips on what to watch for when you buy them:

Good gloves naturally are made of superior skins, which play a big part in "wearability" as well as looks. When buying kidskins or capeskins look for lustrous leather which indicates health, and therefore strength. Choose "doeskins" for plumpness of skin (i.e. supple thickness), for uniform texture and for smooth, velvety finish.

The leather in good gloves is tanned and dyed by a lengthy process. Cheaply-tanned leather may be more or less stiff when washed. Cheaply-dyed skins may crock or fade. If you want to avoid such difficulties, be prepared to invest a reasonable amount of money in your gloves, since a good bit of it goes into those two processes. Also look for leather which has sufficient substance to make it durable, and purchase reliable makes in reliable shops.

Process Important

Good leathers are dampened and stretched lengthwise and crosswise before cutting. Indifferent stretching leaves loose pockets in the skin and thus results in gloves which fail to hold shape. Good gloves are cut by a razor-sharp die in which dimensions are calculated to a twelfth of an inch. Poor gloves often are whacked out by a sort of cookie-cutter process that results in poor fit. Check for firm, clean-cut outlines if you want your gloves to fit and hold their shape.

The skillful sewing of quality gloves contributes much to appearance and wear, while the hasty assembly of poor ones often results in fingers pulling to one side. Make sure the seams of yours are straight and even, and that the gloves appear cleanly made.

Finally, buy gloves which fit your hand easily. Tight-fitting gloves wear less well and their vogue is as dead as daguerreotypes.

As far as price is concerned, this is one expert's opinion: Two-dollar gloves give a lot for the money if that is all you can spend. But three-dollar gloves generally are a better long-run buy for they have a bit more chic and finer leather and should give a year's wear. Five dollars will buy a really good pair.

These doeskins have dignity, beauty and wearability, and are the mark of the "lady" on all occasions. The sewn-by-hand detail gives them fit and distinction. They're meant to be worn not carried, for they stand up perfectly with daily washings

Famous Model Says Health Is Her First Aid to Beauty

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN A girl can draw $25 an hour—which sounds like a week's wages just for looking healthy and smiling at the camera, it pays to be healthy and smiling comes easy. And so Jinx Falkenburg finds it!

You may not recognize the name, but the face is bound to be familiar—she's the gorgeous outdoor girl whose photograph decorates so many of the current magazine covers and expensive advertisements. Probably her pictures would be used even more extensively but for the fact that she is one of the main attractions in a current Broadway hit, and that the show people just laugh—the old meanies—at the very idea of letting a girl have time off to pose for the photographers.

Such success goes to prove a number of points—the first, that it pays to be healthy! What Jinx has that some of the other beauties haven't is a look of sheer, exuberant health. And that's no accident! Mrs. Falkenburg's little girl has been brought up right. She got plenty of fruits, vegetables including spinach, milk and even, in the winter, cod liver oil! And she was encouraged to swim and to play tennis with such gratifying results that she is now a backstroke champion and ranks sixth among California's tennis players.

Enjoys Her Sport

She enjoys outdoor exercise so much that she regards its streamlining effect as purely incidental—even though other people don't! Here are her measurements: Bust, 36 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 37½ inches. She weighs 125 pounds and stands 5 feet, 7 in her bare feet—which is further evidence of a good, balanced diet while growing up!

Certainly she proves the advantages of learning to play while you're young! Nowadays her favorite recreation is tennis, swimming or, when the weather is too cold for those, hiking in the country. She manages to spend every week-end out in the country so that she can be out of doors as much as possible. That is a practice many a career girl could copy, with benefit to health and looks.

Like many tall girls, Jinx has been prone to regard her height as something of a vexation—until Al Jolson put her in his show. But since she is required to walk the full length of the stage every night and two afternoons a week, without speaking a word, holding the audience's attention by sheer force of a regal appearance, she has quit trying to minimize her stature, and is working to perfect her posture.

"One of the things I learned not to do in walking," she says, " is to cross one foot in front of the other in making a turn." Here's what she does, and you might like to work out in front of a full-length mirror for an audience of one: Instead of crossing one foot in front of the other to make a turn, shift the weight to the near foot—that is, to the foot you pivot on—and turn that way.

Main Requisites

What about the hands? "They're always a problem." Jinx sighs. "The minute I get set on the stage, I begin to think how much better I would look if my hands were in some other position—but I don't change! Moving the hands about makes you appear fidgety, and that is worse than looking awkward! I make myself wait until the next performance to try out the new position."

One of the main requisites for poise is a smoothly functioning nervous system and Jinx protects herself—the smart girl—from too much wear and tear by setting aside a definite time for rest each evening before the show.

Wed Seven Years to Neurasthenic Husband, Woman Asks How to Overcome Her 'Devastating Boredom'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am confronted with the problem of increasing boredom—utter, devastating boredom. (At least, I think that's my trouble). I'm 33, and for seven years I've been married to a Government clerk. We have a 4-year-old son. When he was born, I gave up a good position (which I do not regret), and became a conscientious mother and housekeeper.

During the experimental stages of my new homemaking tasks, I was interested in books and magazines dealing with the homemaking arts. Now, however, my tasks are performed automatically and I get no kick out of them. Yet I could bear with them, if I could hope for relief in the evenings, when my husband comes home. If only he and I could talk! But no. He requires and gives only silence.

At the office, he is a Milquetoast. At home, he takes excellent care of himself. His meals must be perfectly balanced, his xercise measured, his sleeping and waking hours exactly regulated. Often, very often, he passes up his after-dinner cigarette, if he feels that his daily tasks have been a little more strenuous than usual. And the only part of his clothes that ever wear out are the seat of his pants!

After supper, we bury ourselves in newspapers and the silence that envelops us reminds me of the tomb. On rare occasions my husband harangues me on some topic with such overconfidence that discussion would be futile. He just sort of speaks a piece, very loudly and definitely. That over, sinlence again reigns. The grunts with which he answers my queries; the half-sleepy look he deals out when I attempt an interesting anecdote; his unpleasant requests to "leave me alone, I don't want to tax my mind after office hours"—these things simply bowl me over. He doesn't realize what a bore and a boor he is.

I've tried to find an outlet for my energies elsewhere. My first efforts were in perfecting my housekeeping,—efforts with which my husband is very well satisfied. Next, I took to excessive reading; and of course the inevitable reaction set in. Now I do very little reading. And that, I am sure, is because I have no one with whom to discuss what I read. The few discussions I have tried to encourage became arguments, which ended in tirades without ryhme or reason.

Due to our limited income, we go out only rarely. And we cannot afford company more than once or twice a month. Hence I believe I suffer for lack of social intercourse, and I feel so lonesome! Once (perhaps rashly), I took to writing, thinking my Odyssey of a girl Government employe might find a publisher. But the pile of rejection slips towered to high heaven before I gave up. My poetry was no more successful. And thus ended the writing venture.

Could my problem boil down to a silly restlessness, due to some undefined hoping? From the beginning of our marriage, my husband and I discovered a biological incompatability which doctors diagnosed as neurasthenic frigidity. Treatment proved fruitless, so I resigned myself to accommodate my warmer nature to my husband's coldness. Could this account for my feelings?

Whatever the reason, I dread the future. Winter is upon us again, and we've resumed our usual retirement to the usual corners, barricaded behind the usual newspapers and magazines with the usual silence reigning over all. We couldn't be more alone, each to himself, at the North Pole!

What's to do? I feel a real need of "live" living. I cannot conform to this social and mental vegetating. I would reach out for any lifeline to rescue me. Would you be so kind as to discuss my problem?

COLLEGE GRADUATE.

Work Outside Home Essential to Salvation

DEAR C. G.: With your nerves crying out for maximum mental and physical exercise, the only solution (short of divorce) of your problem of social and emotional frustration lies in going back into the business world, and using the income and contacts thus derived to create a life of your own within the marriage.

A woman of your dynamic health, exceptional capabilities and imaginative ambitions should be easily able to dovetail and carry the combined responsibilities of marriage, motherhood and office work—and, indeed, make a richer contribution to the marriage as a result of finding a safety-valve" outlet for your irrepressible energies.

Unless your energies are directed into adequately absorbing channels of construetive expression, they are bound to foment serious trouble for yourself and your intimates, sooner or later. Either your personality will sicken and deteriorate, until you become as neurasthenic as your husband in time; or your dammed-up emotions will one day explode in a marriage-wrecking upheaval; or you will make your child's life a burden with excessive ministrations.

Your problem doesn't "boil down to a silly restlessness, due t osome undefined ... oping." As I have implied, your restlessness is symptomatic of a robust spirit, —which has been cheated of its rightful expectation of stimulating mental companionship and emotional satisfaction in marriage.

You are a strong and gallant person, as is indicated by your seven years' tireless effort to adjust to a robot-type of existence. That struggle would have permanently blighted a lesser soul; and it is distinctly to your credit that you are still seeking, alertly and with humor, the conventionally acceptable solution of the problem which your husband's pallid temperament presents.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Greek Revolt Failure Foils Italian Plans

Long-Planned Plot Described in Resume Issued at Sofia

By the United Press

Sofia, Nov. 13.—Italian troops marched into Greece on the morning of October 28 fully expecting that a revolution would break out immediately in Athens and overthrow the Greek government, according to an official resume of the Italo-Greek War issued by the Greek Legation today.

The resume said Italy had made complete and detailed plans for the speedy occupation of Greece.

"A revolution was to break out in Athens at the moment the invasion was announced," the statement said.

"Italian Minister Grazzi had precise instructions. Half of Greece was supposed to be Italophile and the remainder republican. The government was to be overthrown immediately. All that would remain would be for the army to unleash violent action against the frontiers to paralyze the civilian population and communications, in case there was a mobilization, then install Fascist administrators in Italian-occupied territory."

Grazzi Reported Out

[Diplomatic quarters in Salonika claimed Grazzi has resigned from the Fascist diplomatic service because of accusations he misinformed the Italian government regarding prospects of Greek resistance and strength of the Greek army.]

Evidence of Italian preparation for the attack was said to be shown by the fact that Italian bombers have been manned by pilots of Italian air lines which operated over Greece. It was alleged they had studied the Greek communications systems for years and were assigned to "terrorize civilians and paralyze communications."

The resume was described as covering the "first phase of the Italo-Greek conflict, up to the time the new Italian commander was appointed."

Invading Italian troops had at that time been driven from all territory they had occupied during the first few days of the fighting, the resume reported.

Only Eight Greek Divisions

It added that the Greeks had had only eight divisions to oppose nine Italian divisions. The Italian divisions were said to have had more than the regular amount of artillery, as well as 250 tanks.

Attacking at 5:50 a. m. on October 28, these forces were said to have advanced quickly through the mountainous Smolika and Rammos regions toward the Pindus region. They reached Samarina and occupied Distraton, within 16 miles of Metsovo.

Here they were "quite filled with joy at their easy victory."

Then the Greeks, led by the Ezvones, counterattacked. This "terrifying counterattack" resulted in "catastrophic disphersal and dissolution of the enemy," the resume said.

COMTESSE DE CASTELLANE, sister of Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, will tell of the relief work done by Girl Scouts of France among war refugees, in a talk Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock to Girl Scouts of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase District. The meeting will be at the All Saints Episcopal Church on Chevy Chase Circle, with the girls of the 26 troops in District 3 invited to attend.

Comtesse de Castellane, who is now a guest at the home of her sister, has for many years shared Mrs. Tuckerman's interest in Girl Scout work. The park of her chateau at Angouleme was thrown open to Girl Scouts in the Bordeaux region and was headquarters for their relief activities among war refugees until the German occupation.

The meeting Monday is being arranged by Mrs. Carl I. Aslakson, leader and the members of her troop.

TO AWARD PRIZES—Miss Ivy Lindsley, poetry chairman for the D. C. branch, League of American Pen Women, will preside at the poetry award party Saturday at 8 p. m., in the Grafton Hotel studio, at which announcement will be made of the winners in the National Thanksgiving poetry contest, for the District of Columbia region.

This contest is conducted annually by the National Thanksgiving Association and winners in the various regions compete later for national awards. First and second winners will receive money prizes, while books will be awarded to the runners-up.

Mrs. Grace Keiss Swiggett of Washington is the chairman for this region and Dr. Charles Edward Russell, Mrs. Mae Rose Tarkman, poetry chairman for the A. A. U. W.; Miss Elizabeth Aldrich, Kinton Kilmer, P. P., of the Catholic Poetry Society, and Miss Lindsley, are other members of the committee.

Judge of the contest is Emory C. Pharr, editor of the poetry journal "Silver Star."

Hostesses for the evening, in addition to Miss Lindsley, will be Claudia Rice Scott, Leila Pier King, Barbara Schmitt Whitney, Evelyn Sherrill and Peggy Lawshe.

PEACE SHOP OPENS—The Pax Shop, 1734 I Street Northwest, for the sale of used clothes, operated for the benefit of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, is opening for the season. There women sell the clothes they are tired of or have outgrown—clothes that are still "perfectly good," and which others can buy and wear.

The proceeds go to the work of the league, which is carrying on despite the dark picture in Europe.

TO INSTALL OFFICERS—The Florence Crittenton Baby's Lovers Circle will meet Tuesday with Mrs. D. C. Bradley at the Taft House Inn, 1603 K Street Northwest.

Officers will be installed, including Mrs. Green Hackworth, president; Mrs. L. C. Pickett, vice president; Mrs. Samuel Croft, secretary; Mrs. J. C. Schutrumph, recording secretary; Mrs. Carl F. Bond, treasurer; Mrs. D. C. Bradley, representative of board, and Mrs. R. Lee Spire, big sister.

BOARD ELECTS—The annual meeting of the board of managers of the Washington Home for Incurables, recently held, resulted in the reelection of those members whose terms were expiring. The names of Mrs. James Clement Dunn and Mrs. Charles Warren were added to fill existing vacancies. The President, Mrs. E. R. Finkenstaedt, was reelected as were other officers and trustees.

The president, in her report, stated the outstanding accomplishment of the year had been the completion of the Hartmann Memorial Wing, which was formally opened on April 16. She also said that the new training school for practical nurses was functioning satisfactorily with an enrollment of 22 students. There are openings for a few more at present.

PLAN CARD PARTIES—The annual card party of the American Eagle Chapter, D. A. R. will be held tomorrow at the home of the past regent, Mrs. Harvey B. Gram, sr., 1750 Lamont Street Northwest. Reservations are being taken by the committee in charge: Mrs. J. Lee Wilkinson, regent; Mrs. Gram, Mrs. Edwin J. Ryan, and Miss Helen Leonard.

The Magruder chapter has announced a card and game party for Wednesday evening at 3327 Seventeenth Street Northwest. Mrs. Merle Freeman is chairman, assisted by Miss Regina Magruder Hill, a former regent, and Miss Elizabeth Gittings. The proceeds are for the general activities of the chapter.

Clifton Olmstead, a young and talented musician, will play.

Japan Wins 1,300,000-Ton Increase in Oil Supplies

By the Associated Press

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Nov. 13.—Japan's oil supplies from the Netherlands East Indies will rise from 494,000 tons a year to 1,800,000 tons under an agreement announced today, with United States and British companies acting as importing agents for the Japanese.

The agreement is expected to remove a possible source of trouble in view of urgent Japanese needs and the weakened position of the Dutch Empire since the fall of the Netherlands to Germany—a weakness which would make highly problematic the success of Duth defense against any effort to seize oil properties in the Dutch East Indies.

It was worked out between Dutch colonial and oil company officials and Tadaharu Mukai, chairman of the vast Japanese Mitsui interests and representative of Japanese oil companies.

However, the Standard Vacuum Oil Co. and the Rising Sun Petroleum Co., Japan subsidiary of British Shell, will serve as importers for Japan and officials of both the Standard and Shell interests were consulted in the long negotiations.

[The United States and British governments, according to statements in the House of Commons, also watched the negotiations closely. The agreement was a victory for Japan in that she long has been eager to lessen her dependence for oil upon United States and British sources.]

Japan already was getting 494,000 tons of oil a year from the Netherlands East Indies. Now she gets an additional 1,306,000 tons—760,000 tons of it in crude and the remainder in other oil products.

[Japan's annual gasoline and oil needs—based on last year's consumption—was estimated at about 25,500,000 barrels, approximately 3,650,000 tons. From the United States alone, Japan bought, last year, about 30,000,000 barrels—4,280,000 tons—leaving a surplus in storage from that source of 630,000 tons.

[Japan has negotiated with Netherlands East Indies authorities and individual companies for several months in an effort to obtain large increases in her oil supplies from the East Indies fields and several times, the Japanese heard reports an agreement had been reached.

[These reports were denied by the British, who said they had contracts for all the Netherlands East Indies production of high octane (aviation) gasoline, and later by reliable spokesmen at Batavia.]

Japanese Push to South Held Near

the Japanese activities.

[The London Daily Mail published today a government announcement that Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham had been appointed commander in chief of Britain's fighting forces in the Far East with headquarters in Singapore, the Associated Press said.

[At the same time it was disclosed, without amplification or details, that further reinforcements had reached the Far East.

[Sir Robert's command will include Malaya, Burma and Hongkong. He will cooperate with the naval commanders in chief of China and the East Indies and with the commander-in-chief of India.]

Informed quarters believed the Japanese push will start within a week and will result in an immediate occupation of Saigon and other strategic points in Indo-China not covered by the French-Japanese agreement of September.

The formula for tapering off the China war, it was believed, concludes early recognition of the Japan-sponsored "national government of China" in Nanking headed by Wag Ching-Wei, who is said to have assured the Japanese he can obtain support of South China provincial leaders.

Japan's agreement with Russia, according to the reports, includes a cessation of all Soviet assistance to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek.

The Japanese were said to believe that once Russian aid is ended and the South China leaders alienated, Chiang and his followers can be "effectively isolated" and dealt with at Japan's convenience.

Foreign intelligence services reported heavy Japanese troop concentrations at Haiphong, French Indo-China, where the Japanese have military rights under their agreement with France, and at Kwangchowan, the French leased territory in South Kwangtung Province.

Large numbers of Japanese troop transports were concentrated in the area.

Saigon Believed an Objective

Occupation of Saigon, according to the reports, would be only a beginning of the push which eventually might be extended as far as the Netherlands East Indies.

Additional Japanese troop withdrawals from various points in central China, including Wuhu, Nanking, Hankow and Hangchow were reported yesterday, and the Japanese army newspaper Sin Shun Pao said significantly that Japan would not permit the China conflict to divert her from her objectives "in the South Pacific and the Indian Ocean."

across the Adriatic west of Durazzo.)

"At Valona high explosives and incendiary bombs hit ammunition dumps, causing fires and explosions. Explosions still were continuing when our aircraft left 20 minutes later."

"A motor transport concentration also was attacked, bombs bursting in the center of the parks and starting fires which still were blazing 25 minutes after the target was left. An airdrome was dive-bombed and considerable damage inflicted.

Sea Routes About Severed

"A large ship in the harbor at Valona was bombed.

"Our long range aircraft which attacked Bari (Italian Adriatic port) scored a direct hit on a large refinery building, a great sheet of flame shooting into the air when the first stick of bombs struck.

"From all these operations our aircraft returned safely."

[A 60 per cent reduction in troop and material movements from Italy to Albania was reported in Athens, International News Service said, in consequence of the devastating British air attacks.

[Although numerous Italian army transports were said to have landed four divisions comprising some 60,000 troops at Valona, it was understood the transport of men and supplies from Italy was growing progressively more difficult.

[Complete severance of all sea routes between Italy and Albania was expected to be accomplished shortly, according to Greek advices, and it was considered doubtful whether two Italian divisions at Brindisi will be able to embark.]

At the same time the Greek high command announced that its own planes had bombed airdromes at Koritza, destroying "a considerable number" of Italian craft on the ground and blowing up a large building. An Italian pursuit plane was declared shot down and "enemy bivouacs" bombed.

The Italians were accused by the Greek command of bombing interior cities and villages of no military importance, and it was said that there were "a few dead and wounded."

Greek commanders strengthened their lines tonight in the belief that Italian legions, whom they reported in at least momentary defeat, were reorganizing for a new invasion campaign.

Themselves now confronting some Greek invaders on Italian-protected Albanian soil, the Italians presumably will fill in their ranks soon and try to work out a method or locale of attack not so susceptible to bogging down on mountain roads or before Greece's defenders.

One of the principal tasks before Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, the new Italian commander, is replacement or rebuilding of the reportedly shattered Alpine division which the Greeks, the weather and terrain trapped in the Pindus mountain border region.

The Greek high command reported today that a stream of Italian wounded and prisoners was pouring back through the advancing Greek lines, but there the front was generally quiet.

There was continuous snow and rain in the mountains.

London Raid Fails, R.A.F. Pounds Italy

Capital Enjoys Night of Quiet After Nazis Lose 4 Planes in Weak Attacks; British Bomb German, Channel Cities

Copyright by New York Times

London, (Thursday), Nov. 14.—Londoners enjoyed another peaceful sleep this morning and last night after German raiders gave up a brief attempt to continue their work of destruction.

The "alert" against imminent danger of enemy bombers went up early last evening, but a triumphant "all clear" call was blown a few hours later.

Although London enjoyed a respite, conditions were evidently favorable for raiders in other parts of the country, particularly along the east coast. Enemy planes attacked shipping off the Scottish shore, and following heavy antiaircraft fire, watchers on the shore in one town saw a plane shot down in flames. Another was believed damaged.

There is no reliable information yet as to the attack on shipping or whether any ships were hit or sunk.

Planes crossed and recrossed northeast England for many hours. They also met with a hot reception from ground defenses.

Yesterday, according to the air ministry, British defender planes shot down four German visitors without any losses to their own forces.

However, British officials admitted the loss of one attacking bomber which took part in the Royal Air Force raids on points in Germany, on the French Channel ports and on the important U-boat base at Lorient yesterday morning and Tuesday night.

[Meanwhile, air raid alarms in Swiss cities late tonight indicated new British raids on northern Italy. Other British bombers were acknowledged late tonight to have bombed Berlin suburbs.]

Although yesterday's German raids on Britain were comparatively small, they threatened once to develop major proportions during the forenoon when 100 German planes crossed the southeast coast, seemingly headed for London. The air ministry said defending forces quickly broke up the enemy formations and made them turn tail.

After that there was a short succession of single German planes which dropped bombs on the southeast and south coast, causing few casualties and very little damage. Raiders were reported over the west Midlands, Wales, northeast England and southeast Scotland yesterday and last night.

London had three daylight alarms yesterday, and during one of them a lone Nazi machine succeeded in reaching the capital but was quickly chased off by heavy antiaircraft fire.

Residents on the southeast coast heard heavy explosions in the direction of the French coast yesterday afternoon, causing them to think that R. A. F. bombers were making a surprise daylight attack on invasion bases or on Germany's big gun emplacements at Cap Gris-Nez. A few hours later British long range guns fired several salvos toward France.

Oil Plants Attacked

Yesterday morning and Tuesday night British bombers attacked oil plants at Geisenkirchen, Cologne and the inland port of Duisberg-Ruhrort, and railroad centers and factories near Cologne. British aerial attackers launched a heavy bombardment on the submarine base at Lorient, while others hammered docks at Flushing and Dunkerque, as well as several German air bases.

For the first time the authorities permitted publication of the news that the Church of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, famous 200-year-old edifice at Trafalgar Square, was damaged in a recent raid. One hundred people taking shelter in a crypt of the church were singing "Annie Laurie" when the bomb exploded on the church pavement, but none of them were hurt.

St. Martin's is the parish church of the King, for whom there is a private pew in the gallery. All the windows on one side of the church were blown in or partly broken, and the figure of Christ in the great stained glass window over the altar was broken.

The Royal College of Surgeons at Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, was slightly damaged also during a recent raid. The Swedish church at Rotherhithe, was also hit by a bomb.

The Birmingham and Coventry cathedrals were hit by incendiary bombs, but damage in each case was small.

Nazis Claim Heavy Hits

Berlin, Nov. 13 (AP).—A number of important military objectives in southern England and London itself were bombed by German pilots today, informed quarters announced here.

Aside from this, heavy hits were claimed to have been scored last night on traffic facilities in northwest London, at the West India Docks and Liverpool and Coventry.

London, Nov. 13 (AP).—Ships of a convoy attacked from the air Monday in the North Sea shot down a total of five planes and damaged two others, the admiralty reported today.

The report thus added two to the toll already claimed. It said they fell victim to antiaircraft guns of the escort vessel Vimiera.

Pine Barracks and More Luxuries Than in 1917 Await Selects; Tempo of Construction on Near by Virginia Posts Increases

By George W. Thorpe

Pine board barracks awaiting paint, serried tents and files of recruits at nearby Virginia posts yesterday formed a picture of an expanding army.

A tour of Forts Myer and Belvoir and Arlington Cantonment emphasized the fact that the high command is ever increasing the tempo of expansion.

As recruits, still garbed in civilian clothes, were marched past post headquarters at Fort Myer, carpenters pushed construction of wooden barracks at Fort Belvoir.

But equally obvious was the fact, true here as throughout the Nation, that many nails will have to be driven and much ground cleared before the Army's centers are ready for a top-speed draft.

Sixty-three Men to Each Barrack

Typical of the barracks that will house new troops at every post in the country are the new wooden structures at Arlington Cantonment, so-called "regulation" quarters.

The score of buildings at the riverside post follow a company unit plan. For each company there are two two-story rectangular barracks with a capacity of 63 men. Other buildings in the unit are the company mess hall, supply depot and recreation hall.

The barracks that house the men of the Twelfth Infantry at Arlington—and those to be modeled after them elsewhere—are of simple design. Box-like, 125 by 29 feet, they contain one large room on both floors, flanked by beds and equipment of the soldiers. From each cot a steel helmet hangs, and in front of the cots, in the center of the room, are gun racks holding Garand rifles.

Most of the infantrymen stationed at the cantonment were at Fort George G. Meade, Md., for rifle practice yesterday, and the barracks were deserted save for two recruits still in civilian clothes.

"New men . . . there are 28 of them coming in today," commented an officer.

The new soldiers had been noticeable because they failed to rise when the officer strode into the room—one of the tenets of service discipline.

The recreation hall was furnished along the lines of a small country club and provided comforts that would have surprised the doughboy of a decade ago.

Opposite a pool table stood leather easy chairs of modern design and nearby a radio, ping pong table and a table piled with books and magazines. Adjoining was a writing room, and a room where all forms of athletic equipment were stored for the benefit of soldiers who had formed football, baseball or basketball teams.

In the supply room nearby was incidental equipment for each soldier ranging from gas masks to writing materials.

While the barracks at Arlington Cantonment all are occupied, housing the post's 1,280 soldiers, officers said that an additional 200 men could be stationed there if necessary.

Belvoir Is Replacement Center

Housing facilities of the camp would be greatly expanded should the Army obtain land of the nearby experimental farm, whose transfer from the Department of Agriculture awaits Congressional action. Then hundreds of volunteers and selectives could be stationed at the cantonment.

Barracks similar to those at the Arlington post are under construction at Fort Belvoir, engineer base south of Alexandria.

This is to be one of two replacement centers in the country for drafted men assigned to the Corps of Engineers, and quarters must be provided for 20,000 troops by March 15, when the second increment of 400,000 draftees begins to don khaki.

The first of the several hundred barracks to be constructed at the post near U. S. route No. 1 appeared conspicuously new yesterday, bare boards contrasting with the Georgian brick style of the post's older buildings.

Quarters for 100 Trainees Now

Officers declared the fort has adequate quarters for approximately 100 trainees to be stationed at Belvoir in the first series of draft calls. But, the fact that the construction program is none too far advanced, was exemplified by a double row of tents standing nearby. These, it was explained, were put into use to house visiting troops from Langley Field, Va.

At Fort Myer, officers of the Third Cavalry looked with interest at a file of recruits in civilian clothes who marched by post headquarters in charge of a sergeant.

Volunteers have been coming to the historic post in a steady stream, but no construction is contemplated at present. Additional troops will be housed in the stone barracks of the fort. However, officers say it is not unlikely that modern barracks of the Belvoir and Arlington variety will be constructed before next year.

Berlin Bombed As Molotoff Dines

contact in the course of their visit.

The general atmosphere of the visit, one authoritative comment notes, permits the assumption that, as the text the original communique announcing the visit indicated, Molotoff's presence in Berlin "not only indicates the reality of Russo-German relations but also their further intensification."

Contact With Japan Maintained

The Wilhemstrasse, this comment states, "obviously sees no necessity of making public any announcements of Russo-German talks before their conclusion"—which coincides with a statement made to foreign newsmen today that it is no practice of German diplomacy, in contradistinction to the procedure of the democracies, to broadcast the results of important deliberations while they are still progressing.

It is likewise mentioned in authoritative comment that "the permanent contact of the Berlin government with the Japanese Ambassador may be assumed to have been maintained in these days."

Official quarters confined themselves to announcing the day's agenda without, however, in any way indicating the nature of the talks or the trend of developments which it is assumed will follow the visit.

The only information made available is to the effect that a concluding communique on Molotoff's three-day visit may be forthcoming tomorrow. If it follows the familiar pattern, however, it will probably be no more informative than the revelations of the last two days.

The outstanding event on the official agenda today was the luncheon given the Soviet premier by Hitler, a continuation of Molotoff's lengthy personal conversation with Hitler yesterday.

Sees Hess and Goering

In the forenoon, Molotoff had a two-hour talk with Goering, who, it is surmised, gave his visitor an extensive picture of the results of the air war against England. Molotoff was accompanied by members of the Soviet air ministry, who are among his delegation. The Soviet premier also called on Deputy Leader Hess, to whom he conveyed the greetings of the Communist Party.

[The world has speculated much that Hitler may intend to get Russia to put sufficient pressure upon pro-British Turkey to keep her out of any developing Balkan or Near East war.

[The German wireless, in a broadcast received in New York, said that when foreign journalists inquired whether the Turkish envoy had appeared at the foreign office, the reply was that this was "likely."

[To questions as to whether the Japanese Ambassador had made a similar appearance, the wireless added, it was replied: "Contact with the Japanese Ambassador is so close that it could not be regarded as an unusual event if he called at the foreign office."

[Franz von Papen, the German Ambassador to Turkey, was said authoritatively to be in Berlin for talks on "all matters pertaining to his sphere of official duties."

[In Moscow today it was disclosed that the counselor of the Japanese Embassy to Moscow—Haruhiko Nishi, an envoy at large with special functions—had gone to Berlin.]

Almazan Awaits 'People's Call,' Fears Wallace Will Be Misled

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 13.—Despite the United States' recognition of Gen. Avila Camacho as president-elect of Mexico, Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan said tonight he still considered himself the president-elect and was waiting for the people of Mexico to ask him to return there.

In an interview conducted through an interpreter, Almazan branded as "wholly unfounded and false charges by the present Mexican administration that I am tied up with the Axis powers."

"My past record definitely shows that I have been the champion of democracy in Mexico and that for many years I have lead the movement of close cooperation between Mexico and the United States," he said.

The general, who has been in this country since shortly after Mexico's presidential election, declined to answer directly questions on his position now that the United States formally has recognized his rival. But when asked about the appointment of Vice President-elect Henry A. Wallace to represent this country at the inauguration of Camacho on December 1, Almazan said:

"Russian tourists are only shown certain things. The danger of a visit to Mexico by Mr. Wallace will be that he will be shown such a stage setup."

The "situation" regarding the presidenecy, he said, was this: Camacho claimed 2,400,000 votes; whereas the Almazan party had proof through affidavits with fingerprints that Almazan received 2,500,000. "And there are not more than 3,000,000 votes in all Mexico," the general said.

U. S. Steel Unit In Alabama Plans Vast Expansion

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 13 (AP).—A broad expension program increasing steel ingot capacity here 400,000 tons annually was announced today by the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary.

Unofficial sources estimated the construction, to require approximately 18 months, would cost $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 and would increase capacity by 20 per cent.

Robert Gregg, president of the Tennessee company, said the increase in ingot capacity would be matched by "a corresponding increase" in capacity of finishing plants.

He made no estimate of the number of employes to be added by the new plants. The Tennessee Co., now employs approximately 27,500 persons in the Birmingham district.

Sloan Advocates 6-Day Work Week

Would Aid Defense, He Says; Lamont Asks Help for China

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Nov. 13.—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the General Motors Corporation, told a dinner meeting of the Academy of Political Science here tonight that the six-day week should supplant the five-day week in American industry in order to speed up national defense as soon as "the slack of unemployment has been taken up and the increasing speed of industry has been utilized to the fullest practical extent."

Sloan also urged that wage rates not be increased until the cost of living increased, lest inflation be provoked.

Presiding at the dinner, Thomas W. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., criticized "certain notable inconsistencies and omissions in our Government's semi-embargo policy" against Japan, and said American business would wholeheartedly support decisions by Washington not to ship material for bombs to Japan and to reduce Japan's available exchange be restricting our Japanese purchases.

He also urged further United States support to China in the form of planes and material.

The dinner concluded the academy's sixtieth annual meeting.

Sloan said nothing would be gained in the first phase of national defense by curtailing normal production for the sake of accelerating defense production until the time came when normal production actually delayed defense.

"The forces within the economy," he warned, "would become unstabilized. Further, the most acute or vital defense needs lie in a very narrow area of industrial activity. Airplanes, airplane engines and ships of war undoubtedly concern us most. They, of course, must have the right of way."

Even with total expenditures for defense likely to average between $5,000,000,000 and $7,000,000,000 annually for the next three years, Sloan added, "our full productive effort in terms of the maximum capacity of men, materials and capital" probably would not be absorbed.

Even with military conscription, he continued, "a general shortage of labor resources does not appear likely in the near future." He said even further expansion of consumer goods was possible, "thus capitalizing expanding purchasing power without interference with the main objective of adequate and speedy defense."

"In addition," he continued, "America today is working a shorter number of hours per week than any other nation—certainly any other involved in war or defnse.

"Output can be increased 20 per cent by working six days a week in place of five days. It seems clear this should be the first step, if the point is reached when the slack of unemployment has been taken up and the increasing speed of industry has been utilized to the fullest practical extent. The penalty for overtime should be canceled during the emergency to encourage a longer work week.

"We should expand existing production in harmony with the increased purchasing power available, to the point of full productivity. We should increase the hours of work per week, should the necessity arise. Under such a program, the standard of living could be maintained. It would, in all probability, be somewhat advanced during the period of emergency.

"The burden of unemployment, such a drain on the economy, would be relieved to offset, in part, the cost of the defense program itself. Taxes and other revenues of the Government would be increased. In other words, we should meet this emergency by expanding the production of goods for both peace and defense, rather than by unduly diverting the production of usable goods to the implements of defense."

Sloan saw inflation as the most striking economic danger today, warning that it must be faced "if we continue on the present road" of "economic fantasies."

'Termites Gnaw' at U. S. Timbers, Ballou Says

Warnings that "our freedoms permit weakness in our American way of life" were pointed out by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District schools, in an address on "The Place of Education in National Defense" yesterday afternoon before the first teachers' institute of the session.

"We must concern ourselves about every citizen or organization of citizens whose purpose or plans are inimical to American ideals and principles. . . . Concerning them we should and must be thoroughly intolerant," Dr. Ballou said at McKinley High School to the white teachers of the school system. The address will be repeated today for the colored teachers' institute at Armstrong High School.

"Where to draw the line between the freedoms contemplated by the Constitution and the 'license' to attack and tear down our democratic institutions involves not only the law, but also morals, fair play, individual liberties and social justice," he said. "We harbor individuals and groups of individuals who are 'termites' gnawing at the foundation timbers of the structure of our Nation."

Another "Weakness"

"The unrestrained partisan type of spokesmen of all political parties in the recent national election resulted in much undignified language, in perversion of truth and in personal abuse of candidates. To what extent can the American people ignore, forget or transcend such partisan politics an unite in an effecitve program of national defense now so necessary in the life of the Nation?"

Referring to the estimate that one-half the children and youth in the United States receive no religious instruction outside the home, Dr. Ballou called attention to the public schools' responsibility to develop ethical character in the pupils, although separation of church and state prevents the public schools from offering religious education.

Intensification of character training and vocational education in the public schools were named among the outstanding needs in the defense of democracy.

Character Training Stressed

"Evidence of corruption in public office, in private life, and failure to discharge properly one's civic duties show the need of intensification of the educational program in the schools looking toward character training in the future citizens of the Nation," Dr. Ballou said.

"Vocational education is of transcendent importance to the strength of the Nation and must find a large place in the educational program for the common defense," he added.

At another point in his address, he said: "The conception that man is a child of God played a conspicuous and compelling role in the lives of individuals and in the development of the colonies and the progress of their efforts for independence as a nation and the establishment of the American way of life. It is my own confident belief that this concept should again become a compelling thought in the actions and lives of men. It is more compelling than any feeling of patriotism; more exalted than any theory of government, and more enduring and abiding than any forms of government devised by man."

"Complacent Satisfaction"

Pointing out that "the American people constitute only about six and one-half per cent of the world's population but possess 45 per cent of the world's wealth," Dr. Ballou said:

"These facts contribute to the complacent satisfaction of the American people, but they constitute the envy of the other less fortunate people of the world. Our natural resources are to us liabilities as well as assets."

He said one measure of the effectiveness of public education will be "the extent to which the children of the foreign born and their parents have been instructed in American ways of living."

White schools were dismissed early yesterday to permit teachers to attend the meeting at 2:15 p. m., and the same plan will be followed by colored schools today.

Civil Service Rules Revised By President

Probation Period For U. S. Workers Cut to 6 Months; Promotion Aided

By Edward Ryan

President Roosevelt, in an order overhauling the civil service rules, yesterday boosted promotion chances for hundreds of Government employes and for the first time wrote into the regulations a ban against racial discrimination in hiring Federal workers.

The President's order was the first general revision of the civil service rules since 1938. Its first purpose, the Civil Service Commission said, was to bring employment policies into line with the national defense needs of Government agencies.

Employe promotions were indirectly the topic of a new rule reducing the probation period for newly hired Government workers from one year to six months. During probation, new employes are not eligible for promotion or transfer.

In practice, the President's order restores the probation rules in use up until two years ago, officials said. Employes hired from now on will again have to serve but six months to become eligible for promotions and transfers, and, Civil Service officials said, there is a chance that the commission will make the order retroactive to cover employes now serving a one-year probation.

Employes who will benefit mostly from the change, it was explained, are those in nondefense agencies. For employes in defense agencies, the commission's recent rule has been to grant exceptions making them eligible for promotions after 30 days, if their agency asks for this action.

For most of the Government's clerical jobs, officials said, six months is long enough to learn whether new workers are satisfactory. The new rules, however, give the commission discretion to order longer probations for particular positions.

First Time in Rules

The racial discrimination ban was placed in the rules for the first time by amending a section which formerly prohibited only political and religious discrimination. The same section was changed, too, by writing in authority for the commission to enforce the recent Hatch Act ban against giving Federal jobs to members of political parties advocating overthrow of the American constitutional form of government.

While improving promotion prospects for new workers, the altered rules, sme officials indicated, may have a different effect on the "in-service" promotion program set up two years ago for Government employes. Under this program, employes on the job could take civil service examinations for better jobs and if they passed their names went on a separate list of eligible candidates. This list, the "in-service" register, was to be used first to furnish the names of candidates for vacant jobs, unless the appointing officer said that he wanted the general list of all who possed the examination.

Because the general list gave appointing officers a wider choice of job applicants, officials explained, they have come more and more to ask for the general list, and skip the "in-service" list.

Lists May Be Dropped

The new rules give the Civil Service Commission discretion, instead of the old outright order, to set up separate lists for Federal workers to qualify by examination for other jobs. The chances are, officials said, that the "in-service" lists for most types of jobs will be dropped, at least during the defense emergency, mainly to cut down the work load on the commission's certification division.

While reducing the chances that "in-service" lists will be used, the new rules widened the field of employes who are theoretically eligible for whatever separate lists are set up. Formerly these lists were closed to employes who held a classified civil service status as individuals, but who were working in jobs outside the classified service.

Meanwhile, Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee announced that House and Senate conferees were planning to meet Monday to go over his bill for extending the civil service. The Ramspeck bill, which would authorize the President to bring 200,000 or more Government jobs into the classified service, has been waiting action of the conference since before the election. Ramspeck and other Congressional leaders are seeking to get the bill passed before the present Congress ends.

Red Revolution Caused War, Says Dr. Walsh

The Bolshevik Revolution of 1918 in Russia caused the European war of 1939, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of Georgetown University's foreign service school declared last night.

Dr. Walsh told an audience of 650, mostly women, at the Willard Hotel that "the chain of demoralization that has struck the modern world leads directly back to the Russian commissars who considered Christ their personal enemy."

Speaking at the first of a series of lectures sponsored by the Convert League of the Catholic Daughters of America, he said that "the attack from the Muscovite left was answered by the rise of fascism on the right," and added:

"Whatever excesses they (the Nazis) have committed, I must admit that the provocation and the springboard into fascism was provided by communism.

"I don't say that what happened after the original resistance to communism is justified. Much of it is not justified. But the battle against communism was."

Now, he added, Stalin is watching and waiting, hoping that the major belligerents will exhaust themselves so he can move in and destroy the Western world.

First Church Diners Hear Dr. Stockdale

Former Pastor Speaks At Congregational 75th Jubilee Dinner

Forces of religion, education and business must lead the way for the prevention of free enterprise in America, Dr. Allen A. Stockdale declared last night at the diamond jubilee dinner of First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest.

Returning to rub shoulders with old and new friends at the church he served from 1930 to 1935, the genial minister, now a lecturer, told the diners that America has the responsibility of preserving the spirit of free enterprise for the rest of the world.

When Dr. Stockdale reminded his audience that the role of the "passionate amateur" had not been "cramped" in America as in "regimented totalitarian lands" and that we have a 3,500 mile imaginary border line between us and Canada without a soldier or fort, the audience roared its applause.

Dr. Stockdale, who now lectures in the interest of the National Association of Manufacturers, was presented by Dr. Charles G. Abbot, toastmaster, and secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. The Rev. Harvey Goddard, chairman of the seventy-fifth anniversary committee, also spoke.

The diamond jubilee year will come to a climax tomorrow at 8 p. m., with an address by Dr. Russell Henry Stafford, pastor of Old South (Congregational) Church, Boston.

Honor guests at last night's dinner included Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, First Church pastor, and Mrs. Anderson; the Rev. and Mrs. Goddard; Dr. Fred J. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, and Mrs. Buschmeyer; the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, and Mrs. Yinger.

Also the Rev. Frederick J. Bishop, of Ingram Memorial Congregational Church, and Mrs. Bishop; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh A Thrift; Mr. and Mrs. William P. Benson; Mr. and Mrs. J. U. Craig; William Gilbert, Dr. Abbot, and Mrs. Stockdale. The Tuxis Club served the meal.

Bandit Gets $62 Booty in Liquor Store Holdup

A colored bandit netted $62 last night when he rifled the cash register of the People's Liquor Co., 1112 G Street Northwest, after threatening an employe with a gun.

Dave Sandoe, 35, of 5305 Seventh Street Northwest, told police the man threatened him with a nickel-plated revolver, then snatched $50 in bills and $12 in change from the register. He fled on foot.

Another bandit, also colored, obtained $26 from Harold Mitchell, colored, manager of a filling station at 1535 New Jersey Avenue Northwest. From Mitchell's hand he snatched a bag containing the day's receipts as the manager walked along New Jersey Avenue, in the 1600 block, after leaving the filling station.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Constance Albright Snow and Helen Fetter Cook present Alec Templeton in a piano recital Wednesday night in Constitution Hall, Program: Prelude to "Alceste" (Lully-Templeton), Chorale-Prelude, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" (Bach-Hess), Sonata in C sharp minor (Beethoven), Prelude in B minor (Rakhmaninov), Prelude in C major (Prokofiev), Slow Air from "Charterhouse Suite" (Vaughan Williams), "Poissons d'or" and "Jardins sous le pluie" (Debussy), Waltz in G major, "Ghost Rhapsody," "Mozart Matriculates" (Templeton), Improvisations.

Alec Templeton, who had been only a radio voice to most of the auditors assembled in Constitution Hall last evening, became a visible person with more claims upon their attention than those of an entertainer. They were confronted with a young musician who has triumphed both artistically and spiritually over the affliction of blindness. It was evident in their attitude toward him during the serious part of his program that they were aware of the miraculous quality of that triumph. Their admiration was quickened, their sympathy was stirred, and their congratulations went to him in cordial applause.

Ray C. B. Brown

Mr. Templeton is a capable, but not a great pianist. What makes his technical facility so notable is that he has acquired it by the sense of touch alone. The keyboard is for him nothing but a dimension of which every fraction of an inch is familiar. The accuracy of his placement is perfect; no false notes are struck, and even his ascending glissandi stop exactly where they should. His hands remain within the dimension and are never raised in the superfluous gestures traditionally associated with virtuosity.

While his command of dynamics and tone color is ample, his playing has a curious one-dimensional character unrelated to the actual number of decibels he produces. His tone has an indescribable feeling of remoteness, of detachment from solidity. Probably for that reason, his reading of Beethoven's C sharp minor sonata was the most memorable of his interpretations; it was like a musical communion on a superior plane.

The latter part of the program was in complete contrast with the first. In it Mr. Templeton disclosed the temperamental ebullience, the cheery camaraderie, the buoyant spirit, the quick wit which have endeared him to the radio public. Moreover it revealed something far more important—his excellent musicianship. No one can improvise as he did without having a thorough and instantly available knowledge of harmony and counterpoint.

On a five-note theme suggested by as many auditors he played in the style of Bach, Chopin, Stephen Foster and George Gershwin. He wove together bits of "Dinah," "Three Little Fishes," "Pop Goes the Weasel"a nd Liszt's "Campanella," after these titles had been shouted at him. Equally incongruous was his clever extemporaneous blending of Debussy's "Clair de Lune," "Stardust," "La Cucuracha" and a soprano aria from "La Traviata."

Boy, 18, Held In Auto Death Of Pedestrian

Joseph Stansbury, 39, Critically Hurt In a Collision

While a coroner's jury was investigating the traffic death of an elderly pedestrian yesterday, a 39-year-old man was injured critically in a collision between an automobile and a truck.

The latter, Joseph Stansbury, of 1108 C Street Southeast, suffered injuries to his chest, lacerations of his head and shock when the car he was riding in struck a truck at First and P Streets Southwest. He was taken to Providence Hospital where doctors said his condition was critical.

Police said the truck was driven by Joseph P. Riffit, 17, of Boyds, Md., and that the car the injured man was riding in was operated by George H. Ruppert, 42, of 3361 Clay Street Northeast.

At the traffic inquest the jury held Winston S. Goodloe, 18, of 3814 Legation Street Northwest, for Police Court action under the negligent homicide act in connection with the death of Frederick W. Duvall, 71, of 2444 Thirty-seventh Street Northwest.

Duvall, a jewelry salesman, was knocked down as he crossed Wisconsin Avenue near Massachusetts Avenue, last Monday. He died the same day at Emergency Hospital.

Lieut. William J. Liverman, of the police accident prevention unit, said the Goodloe automobile had a defective headlight and traveled more than 150 feet after striking Duvall, who had stopped in the center of the street.

Gunman Robs Same Gas Station Employe Again

Luther M. Noblitt, of 1302 N Street Northwest, a filling station attendant who was robbed September 4, saw his assailant again yesterday under similar circumstances—behind a gun.

It was about 7:30 a. m. and Noblitt was working at a Standard Oil Co. station at Tenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, when he saw the familiar figure approaching. It was the man who robbed him two months ago.

Before he could call police the man had pulled a gun and was again demanding money. Noblitt gave him $40 and watched him escape on foot.

50 Citizens Locked Out Of School

Michigan Park Association Finds Doors Closed For Second Time

Some 50 members of the Michigan Park Citizens Association stood in the rain at the new Bunker Hill School, Fourteenth Street and Michigan Avenue Northeast, last night, waiting for a custodian to unlock the school so the regular meeting of the association could be held.

The custodian never appeared.

After waiting impatiently half an hour the citizens went home, doubly angry because once before they had been locked out—the previous time, last spring.

Responsibility for opening the school on nights when the association meets rests with the welfare and recreation unit of the Board of Education, John J. Hurley, president of the Michigan Park organization, said.

The welfare association annually sends out a form to the citizens' group, inquiring which night the group will meet. A janitor is then instructed accordingly.

Citizens' association officials called the school principal when the custodian failed to appear last night. The school head was unable to locate the janitor or determine why he had failed to unlock the doors.

Rhode Island Avenue

Erection of traffic lights at the intersection of Eighteenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue, Montana and Rhode Island Avenues, Montana Avenue and Seventeenth Street, Eighteenth and Monroe Streets Northeast, was requested last night by the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association.

The association also urged traffic officials to consider making Queens Chapel Road one way south of Evarts Street Northeast.

Dr. Freeman Wise, chairman of the Woodridge community fund committee, discussed the maintenance of property values in the area. Twenty-five members were inducted. An entertainment program was presented under direction of Herman Riley and Mrs. Catherine Caul, of the Community Center and Playground Department.

North Randle Community

Archie C. Edwards was elected president of the North Randle Citizens Association for a second term last night at a meeting in the portable school at Minnesota Avenue and E Street Southeast.

R. E. Copeland was elected vice president, and Mrs. Rose M. Thomas and Mrs. Pratt J. Chroniger were reelected secretary and treasurer, respectively. Thomas Bethel and Harry W. S. Glemser were reelected representatives to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The association voted to ask for at least temporary surfacing of the fill over Pope's Creek on Anacostia Road at M Street Southeast and of Thirty-second Street between G Street and Massachusetts Avenue Southeast, and for improvement of Randle Circle and Massachusetts and Minnesota Avenues in the vicinity of the circle.

In other resolutions, the citizens agreed to seek better mail delivery for the area and to renew agitation for a school to replace the two-room portable school.

Northeast Boundary

Completion of a long-sought recreation area in Northeast Washington and flood control measures in the community were urged last night at a meeting of the Northeast Boundary Citizens Association.

Members approved a resolution of Charles Norris urging completion of the purchase of 17 acres of land for a recreation area on Forty-ninth Street between Washington and Eades Places. Although the District appropriated money for the project three years ago the land has not been acquired, it was asserted.

A resolution of Bernard Chapman, urging flood control measures on Watts Run, was approved. Members also urged excavation to shift the bed of the stream so it would not overflow Grant Street. The association also seeks paving of the latter thoroughfare.

The association scored the action of the Board of Education in designing a proposed senior high school at Twenty-fourth Street and Benning Road Northeast with capacity for 750 students. There will be 1,200 pupils of school age in the section by the time the school is completed, it was said.

Working for Washington

Randle Highlands' Citizens Led Movement for Sousa Bridge

Formed during the closing years of the last century, the Randle Highlands Citizens Association has worked for 46 years for the improvement of southeast Washington.

It was organized as the East Washington Association and changed its name in 1908, when the present community was named Randle Highlands, according to the unit's new president, Paul Mudd. Members still feel that the southeast section of the District, comprising one-third of the city, is getting less than its share of the annual appropriation. This share is now approximately 20 per cent.

According to Adelbert W. Lee, who served as the association's president for eight years up to this fall, the Randle Highlands group led the movement 10 years ago which culminated in the erection of the John Phillip Sousa Bridge over the Aancostia River on Pennsylvania Avenue, now being completed. Lee is head of the committee which is arranging for the dedication of the bridge next month.

Fifteen years ago the organization assisted in getting bus service in the area east of the Anacostia, where formerly street cars merely crossed the bridge and returned. In 1932, members helped to obtain the addition of the Orr School, at Twenty-second and Prout Streets Southeast, Lee added.

Two perennial objectives of the association are District suffrage, which is considered the only means to obtain fair treatment for southeast Washington, and desirable zoning provisions for the sector.

Through efforts of its zoning committee, large sections in the area—one including 40 square blocks—have been rezoned to permit construction of only detached homes, outlawing apartment houses and commercial establishments.

The association was instrumental in forming, and is now a member of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, organized eight years ago to effect cooperation among southeast citizens' bodies. Present delegates to the council are former President Lee and C. A. Barker.

A branch library to serve the entire District area east of the Anacostia is high among current objectives. Meetings, held on the first Friday of the month in the Orr School, feature discussions of such matters, speakers, and occasional entertainment programs. Next meeting is scheduled for December 6.

Current officers of the association include Paul Mudd, president; Morris Clarke, vice president; Herbert Frazier, secretary; J. H. McCall, treasurer, and G. E. Pray and A. W. Lee, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Police Hunt Stabber in Street Killing

Man Found Wounded In 800 Block of 14th; Restaurant Operator Identifies Assailant

A 40-year-old man was sought by detectives last night for the murder of Jerry Swisher, 29, who died at Emergency Hospital late yesterday of a stab wound in the abdomen.

SWISHER

He was taken to the hospital last Friday when he was found unconscious on the sidewalk in the 800 block Fourteenth Street Northwest by Walter Sawyer, 1315 Park Road Northwest.

Detective Sergts. Jeremiah Flaherty and Frank Ashley began an investigation after Swisher arrived at the hospital. They spoke to the injured man but he said he did not know who had stabbed him.

While the detectives were at the hospital, five men came inquiring about Swisher. They were arrested when they refused to reply to detectives' questions. They were later released, however.

A lookout was broadcast for the 40-year-old suspect last night. He was identified as Swisher's assailant by a restaurant operator.

Swisher lived in the 1200 block of M Street Northwest. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Vera E. Swisher; his parents, Earl and Edith Swisher; a brother, Earl Swisher, jr., and a sister, Mrs. Catherine O'Kada. The body was taken to the Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin Street Northwest. An autopsy will be performed today.

D. C. Colored Students Win Prizes for Essays

Two Washington students, Eva L. Chaplin, of Howard University, and Ruth Hawkins, of Armstrong High School, won prizes in a Nation-wide essay contest for Negro schools conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association, the association announced yesterday.

Almost 150,000 students in 20 States submitted articles. The two Washington winners took second prizes of $25 and a silver medal, cast in the winning design of the 1940 medal contest conducted among Negro art students.

Pleas From Screen Fail To Stifle Partisanship

Public Still Thinks Election Campaign Is On; Noted Yiddish Theater Star to Appear Here; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE AMERICAN PICTURE-GOING PUBLIC evidently has its own notions of the rules of conduct by which it proposes to be governed and has scant regard for screen pleas for political amenity and national unity.

BELL

Immediately before the national election, the Fox Movietone News carried the suggestion that both candidates for the Chief Magistracy were entitled to the respect due a President of the United States; that while applause for the rivals was wholly permissible, disparaging and disrespectful demonstrations should be omitted in the interest of civil deportment and fair play. Or words to that effect.

Now there appears upon all of our screens the "Plea for national unity," originated by Harry M. Warner, president of the Warner Brothers, and underwritten by the entire motion picture industry. This is what it says:

"We have just concluded months devoted to free and untrammeled discussion and debate of the problems confronting the Nation and the qualifications of the respective candidates for the Presidency to meet and effectively deal with them. After the fullest consideration, a majority of our citizens have solemnly expressed their choice of the Chief Executive to lead the Nation during the next four years.

"The election campaign has taken place during a period of recurring critical national and world problems. It was inevitable that during the period of discussion and debate national unity would suffer. The great price which we have paid for our democratic right makes the choice of our leader a sacred one.

"Whatever the differences were among us before election, there should remain no doubt that there are no differences among us today. We must stand as one behind the man of the people's choice. We must not fall prey to the plan of 'divide and conquer.' The Great Liberator has given us our rule of national life—UNITED WE STAND, DIVIDED WE FALL."

So, what happens? So, this is what happens. The applause is doubled—and the boos, hisses and catcalls are multiplied by four!

Celia Adler, distinguished star of the Yiddish theater, will appear at the Jewish Community Center on Sunday night in a recital comprised of her most popular numbers. This will mark the first appearance in the Capital of the daughter of the famous Jacob Adler, who has come to be known as "the first lady of the Yiddish theater." Miss Adler's program will include characterizations in both Yiddish and English—the first half consisting of "Masha," her mono-drama in English; the second of brief sketches in both tongues.

Completed arrangements for the most elaborate dinner and dance in the history of the Washington Variety Club, to be held in the Willard Hotel this Saturday night, were disclosed by General Chairman Harry Brown, at the final meeting of his committee on Tuesday night. The entertainment program will be participated in by some 75 artists and celebrated guests and will be presented in a manner that is unique. It will include a group of songs by Gloria Jean, Universal's juvenile singing star, among them "A Little Bit of Heaven," the theme tune from the picture of the same name opening at RKO-Keith's tomorrow; a personal appearance of Ken Murray, comic star of stage, screen and radio, and Gene Ford's "Bag of Tricks," to be offered by members of the club. A revolutionary scheme of decoration has been adopted and a special menu prepared. Club members and their guests will assemble in the small ballroom of the Willard at 7:20 p. m., with the banquet doors opening at 7:30. The sale of tickets has been the greatest in the history of the club with the limit of 550 sure to be reached by Saturday night.

If all this seems irrelevant in a theatrical column, it should be borne in mind that without this annual levee, its sports events and other promotions, the Variety Club's welfare fund never would have been able to present a fully equipped ambulance to Emergency Hospital, the incubator ward at Sibley Hospital that has reduced the mortality rate of premature babies from 62 per cent to 14 per cent, the motion picture entertainment for all of the District's eleemosynary institutions and the other worthy charities the club sponsors every year as the basic principle of its creed.

Several stars of the Washington Redskins football team will make personal appearances at Sidney Lust's Bethesda Theater Saturday at 1 p. m., and at his Hyattsville Theater at 3:15 o'clock.

'Blondie' Players Denied Vacations

Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake are the only Hollywood players who can't get out of town.

In addition to appearing in Columbia's "Blondie" series, three of which are made each year, they have a weekly air show without layoffs.

During filming of "Blondie Plays Cupid," Miss Singleton reported that she had not been farther away from Hollywood than Palm Spring in the past year and a half.

Foreign-Born Actor Will Fight for U. S.

Paul Lukas, aviator and naturalized American citizen, has offered himself as a fighting man for the protection of his adopted country.

Working in Paramount's terror epic, "D. O. A.," the Hungarian-born screen actor took advantage of 3 hours off to drive to Grand Central Air Terminal to volunteer for Army flying duty through his friend, Maj. C. C. Moseley, retired Army officer and active reservist, who is training pilots for the Government.

Ethel Barrymore's New Play Tops List of Theater Bills

"THE CORN IS GREEN." Ethel Barrymore stars in Emlyn Williams' comedy drama opening a week's engagement at the National Theater Monday evening prior to its New York run. Despite the war, Miss Barrymore's vehicle only recently completed two seasons in London with Dame Sybil Thorndike in the central role. The play details the experiences of an Englishwoman in Wales and her ultimately successful effort to lift a lad of 13 from a life in the coal pits to a promising Oxford career, a story paralleling the early life of its author. Edmond Breon, Richard Waring, Mildred Dunnock, Rhys Williams, Charles Pursell, Rosalind Ivan and Thelma Schnee are among the players. Herman Shumlin, whose last production was "The Little Foxes," is both producer and director. Matinees Wednesday nad Saturday.

Capitol

"THE MARK OF ZORRO." With Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell and Basil Rathbone in the pivotal parts, this favorite of an earlier generation of filmgoers returns to the screen in a new guise and with direction by Rouben Mamoulian. Based on the story by Johnston McCulley, "The Curse of Capistrano," it tells of the masked adventurer-bandit, Diego. Gale Sondergaard, Eugene Pallette, J. Edward Bromberg, Montagu Love and Janet Beecher are in the cast. On the stage, "The Toppers" revue features Danny Kaye, the Randall Sisters, the Shyrettos, Allen and Kent and the Capitol Orchestra playing Ferde Grofe's "Mississippi Suite." Opens this morning.

Earle

"MOON OVER BURMA." Dorothy Lamour, Preston Foster and Robert Preston star in this comedy of misadventures in Rangoon's jungles. Complications include Foster's distaste for Miss Lamour and the financial straits of a plantation. Albert Basserman, Doris Nolan, Addison Richards, Frederick Worlock and Harry Allen are featured. On the stage, "Birthday Party" observes the second Earle anniversary of the Roxyettes, who offer two new routines, "Minuet in Swing" and "Jump the Rope." Gali-Gali, Egyptian magico; Walter Dare Wahl and the Five Canistrellis are also featured, and there are new "Sing-a-Song-With-Mike" numbers. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"A LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN." Gloria Jean, a current visitor to the Capital scene, continues the role of "The Under-Pup" which first brought her to the screen. All the uncles upon whom the juvenile star placed such imaginary reliance in "The Under-Pup" now come to make up her unique family. C. Aubrey Smith, Hugh Herbert, Robert Stack, Stuart Irwin, Nan Grey, Eugene Pallett and Billy Gilbert are featured, as are the two youngsters recalled from the recent Deanna Durbin film, Butch and Buddy. Opens tomorrow morning.

Riverside Stadium

"ICE FOLLIES OF 1941." The spectacular revue on ice continues every night at 8:30 through Saturday, November 23. Matinees are scheduled for both Saturdays as well as for Thanksgiving Day, November 21. Comedy and dancing are offered by this company of 70 skaters headed by Evelyn Chandler, Roy and Eddie Shipstad, Bess Earhardt, Bruce Mapes, Frick and Frack and a galaxy of Olympic stars. The Riverside Stadium is at Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest.

Metropolitan

"RHYTHM ON THE RIVER." After a week's engagement at the Earle, this Bing Crosby film returns with a company that further includes Mary Martin, Basil Rathbone, Oscar Levant, Oscar Shaw and Charley Grapewin. Songs in the picture include, "Only Forever," "Ain't It a Shame About Mame?" and "Rhythm on the River." Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

Little

"THE BAKER'S WIFE." The notable French film has entered its fifth week, threatening the record run of last year's "Ballerina." Raimu is the star of the piece, playing a baker who cannot bake because his wife has run off with a handsome shepherd. John Erskine wrote the English subtitles.

Trans-Lux

"MEXICO," the "March of Time's" latest release, subtitled "Good Neighbor's Dilemma," discusses Mexican-United States relationships as the principal short subject at the newsreel house. An "Information Please," with Elmer Davis as guest expert, and "The Mad Hatter," a color cartoon, also are billed. Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

ANN CORIO brings her own new revue to the burlesque citadel for a week beginning Sunday afternoon. Billy Hagen is the celebrated display artiste's chief comic associate and John Barry also is featured. Hinda Wassau continues her current engagement through Saturday's midnight performance.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 13.

SATURDAY NIGHT, at the National Press Club dinner, President Roosevelt conversed with Leon Henderson, of the National Defense Council. Henderson—who pooled his hometown election bets with the local undertaker—told the President that among the bets he had made was one of $5, at even money . . . He pointed to a noted newspaperman in the room and said: "That's the man. He was so sure, he bet even money" . . . The President indicated no surprise.. He shrugged and answered: "I always knew that fellow was slipping."

LYONS

THE UNITED AMERICAN Spanish Aid Committee, tired of the red tape required to get 10,000 Spanish Loyalists from France to Mexico, will purchase a ship for $300,000, large enough to transport 2,000 men each trip. In order that the American Government should not be involved, the vessel will be chartered under the Mexican flag. . . . Station WNYC, the municipal station, which broadcasts missing persons alarms, made an unusual broadcast last week-end. For the first time in three years the station announced: "There are no persons missing in New York today." . . . As a step toward achieving national unity, Tommy Corcoran and Adolf A. Berle, jr.—who had been feuding privately for a long time—shook hands last week.

THIS IS WHY Noel Coward made his sudden trip to Australia: In New York he met the Australian representative here, Richard Gardiner Casey—who told him of the work being accomplished in Australia . . . "But the empire needs a good-will ambassador there," said Casey. "Some one who'll bring cheer and encouragement. An unusual man who can accomplish this" . . . "Is there such a man?" asked Coward . . . "Yes, there is," Casey suggested. "I know a chap who can do it. A certain chap named Noel Coward" . . . Coward hesitated only a moment before making reply and rushing to get the reservations. "I think," he told Casey, "I can persuade that chap to go."

BOB MOSES, who announced that New York City would need four new highways to link the traffic arteries, as an aid to national defense, hopes to get Federal funds for this program through the intervention of Rex Tugwell . . . Count San Felice, of the Italian Consul General's office, now commutes between El Morocco and his new post in Albany . . . Beatrice Lillie will return to America before Christmas. Her son now is stationed in Wales . . . Samson Raphaelson, the playwright, finally has disposed of his Hollywood estate. He had despaired of ever being able to sell it, and now reports: "I sold it at a 50 per cent loss—which is 100 per cent profit to me."

CHARLIE CHAPLIN has delayed his return to Hollywood, because he still hasn't had enough of Manhattan. He has been touring the town, unrecognized, and finds delight in mingling with groups of youngsters discussing current events. With them he argues the philosophies prescribed in the message with which he concludes "The Great Dictator." Chaplin says: "The most pleasure I've had here was in seeing a high school boy point to his forehead and say: 'The State is here. The State is not the Army, not in the Capitol, not you nor me—but here'" . . . Arthur Kober's new book will be called "Grand Concourse." . . . The Canadian government is permitting the receipts of the road-touring "Hellzapoppin'" to be shipped across the border.

LOUIS B. MAYER, who is heading the Community Chest drive for Los Angeles, assembled all his employes and made three speeches appealing for funds. Mayer then showed the group a special movie in which Mickey Rooney is featured. The film, made especially for this charity drive, showed Rooney heroically renouncing the purchase of a second-hand car and contributing the money instead to local charities . . . The meeting, attended by several hundred employes, concluded, and the audience began to leave. Outside, the crowd parted like the Red Sea, to make way for Mickey Rooney—driving a new Rolls-Royce, with a specially tinted body and featuring the most modern gadgets ever placed on an automobile.

DAMON RUNYON and C. C. Green have organized a Misery Market for Broadway—giving the latest quotations on who doesn't talk to whom . . . French officials here insist that Henri-Haye, the ambassador, will be succeeded by Jules Henri—who was an attache at the French Embassy some time ago . . . Frank Lloyd Wright, the architect, has designed a kitchenless home for Jed Harris. Rather than devote house space to a kitchen, Wright designed a special, portable contraption on which all the cooking and baking can be done . . . Joe Frisco and Maxie Rosenbloom will work at a new "Slapsie Maxie's" cafe to be opened in Miami Beach this season.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Chicago, Nov. 13 (INS).—Comes the following pertinent statement from Para: "Contrary to rumors that Gary Cooper will star in Ernest Hemingway's 'For Whom the Bell Tolls,' or any other picture, Paramount states officially today that Mr. Cooper is under exclusive contract to Samuel Goldwyn and that there is no basis for these reports. At such time as the services of Gary Cooper are desired by Paramount, they will negotiate with Mr. Goldwyn."

PARSONS

A 6-year-old child should be able to read between the lines that a tug-o'-war has been going on between Para and Mr. G. over Gary. But if Gary doesn't get to make the Hemingway story he'll be pretty much in the position of the innocent bystander who was shot!

Angna Enters, the very clever pantomimist, who has become world-famous, is being sought by Sol Lesser to play the lead in her own original, "The Green Hour." Miss Enters is now on tour, and I understand is making every effort to get to Hollywood, for Sol believes he will be able to do for her what he did for Martha Scott.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Chicago collected at random: Paul Draper is entertaining Heidi Vossler, of the "Louisiana Purchase" company. She planed in to see him—and that romance will bear watching; things aren't as black as they first seemed between Margaret and Hal Roach, and nothing could make their friends happier than news that they have reconciled; Carole Landis gets her divorce today in Los Angeles and her ex, Willis Hunt, jr., isn't contesting; when Dottie Lamour sings at the newsboys' benefit Thanksgiving Greg Bautzer will be the only outsider. Not because Greg is Lamour's amour—but because he used to sell Los Angeles Examiners himself.

Miriam Hopkins, worried because she felt the Hollywood press didn't like her, is delighted over the reviews on "Lady With Red Hair;" Kate Smith, with Ted Collins and her entire troupe, arrive in Hollywood Saturday to huddle with Darryl Zanuck about "Great American Broadcast;" it's wedding bells soon for Jimmy Heusen, Bing Crosby's song writer, and Nan Wyn, New York night club singer; my good friend, Prudence Penny, starts her fourth cooking short for Pete Smith today and it deals with good recipes for male cooks; had luncheon with Ann Marsters and T. Netcher.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Chaplin's New Comedy Enters Second Week

It is not surprising that Charlie Chaplin's most pretentious production, "The Great Dictator" should continue a second week, beginning this morning, at Loew's Palace Theater. This departure from the familiar Chaplin norm not only includes a full measure of typical Chaplin low-comedy antics, but embraces, also, a startling revelation of its author-producer-star-director's capacity to encompass as biting a bit of satire as ever has found its way to the screen.

There are those who contend that Chaplin is not a satirist. Admittedly he never has been before. But he is now. His ridiculous depiction of the pathetic futility of You-know-who is a masterpiece of character deflation, effectively set off by a comparably able caricature of the heel from "The Boot" if the geographical identification is not too abstruse, executed with pompous assininity by Jack Oakie.

The action of the picture, as has been pretty well bruited about by now, is divided between an opulent chancellory and the Ghetto. In the opening wartime sequences and those in the Ghetto, Charlie is the old, beloved vagabond, up to all of his former mischief; in the seats of the mighty, which frequently give way under him, he is the overstuffed despot, thwarted at every turn, winding up his misery by an impassioned plea for liberty, tolerance and peace that has furnished a fruitful topic of controversial debate. Try as we may, we can find nothing wrong with it.

While Chaplin is the dominant figure in all of the goings-on, he is by no means the whole show. The aforementioned Mr. Oakie dips in a potent finger, as do Paulette Goddard, Maurice Moscovich, Henry Daniell, Reginald Gardiner, Carter de Haven, Emma Dunn and a large number of others.

The mere fact that "The Great Dictator" has inspired such widespread argument is evidence enough that it is a picture to be seen by all not desirous of remaining mute in current discussions of the cinema.

South should take the ace of clubs on the first lead instead of holding up. After cashing his three high hearts and diamonds, declarer should lead a small club, throwing est into the lead. West can take four club tricks, but then anything he leads will be won by South, who wins the rest of the tricks. If declarer had held up on the opening lead until East was exhausted of clubs and then had played small to the queen of spades in dummy, hoping East had the king, he'd have lost four clubs and the king of spades, going down one.

Senators Accuse Bank in Railroad Receivership Case

By the Associated Press

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, of the Senate Railroad Finance Committee, asserted yesterday that the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York had represented bondholders in the 1925-1928 receivership of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad while at the same time having interests differing from those of the bondholders.

Wheeler and Truman made the charge in a statement accompanying one of the committee's investigation reports of the road's finances.

"By virtue of being trustee under the St. Paul's largest mortgage indenture," their summary of the report said, "Guaranty Trust Co. of New York was admitted to the railroad's receivership and reorganization proceedings as a representative of bondholders. . . .

"Guaranty's interests lay with the bankers rather than with all of the bondholders whose interests they were supposed to protect. . . .

"Throughout the proceedings, Guaranty Trust played a leading role in blocking the progress of the independent bondholders' groups whose interests were among those the trust company was supposed to represent."

Laws Doubts Delinquent's Transfer Legal

Attorney General's Authority Questioned In O'Bryant Case

A study of the Attorney General's authority to move juvenile delinquents from reform schools to penitentiaries as they grow older was called for yesterday by Justice Bolitha J. Laws of the District Court.

Before Justice Laws was the habeas corpus plea of Emory O'Bryant, 18, whom the Juvenile Court sent to the National Training School in January, 1939, for stealing three cases of whiskey. The Juvenile Court ordered the youth kept at the school until he was 21. Eight months later he was transferred to Lorton Reformatory. Claiming his detention there is unlawful, he asked Justice Laws to order his release.

Justice Laws indicated his doubt of the Attorney General's authority to make the transfer, observing that the Juvenile Court law provided imprisonment in training schools for the express purpose of keeping young wrong doers out of the company of hardened criminals.

Attorney John T. Bonner, who appeared for O'Bryant, and Assistant Corporation William Martin, were asked to study the applicable laws and submit authorities to Justice Laws on Saturday. Justice Laws also asked that a Department of Justice representative be present when the case is resumed then.

Gabby Hartnett Given Release as Cubs' Pilot

Cubs' Ex-Boss in Friendly Parting

In a friendly atmosphere it was announced by P. K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, that Gabby Hartnett had been released as manager. Hartnett (left) is seen with Wrigley after the announcement

Dismissal Ends Long Service With Chicago Club

Wrigley Announces Waivers to Be Asked On Former Catcher; Leo Is Surprised

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Gabby Hartnett, who for 19 straight years carried his big red face, bat and chest protector to the plate for the Chicago Cubs, came to the end of the road with that team today.

His contract as Cub manager, said Owner P. K. Wrigley, will not be renewed when it expires December 31.

The surprise announcement, one which was not without a tinge of sadness, thus terminated the big Irish catcher's connection with the team, which began when he joined the Cubs in 1922—a 21-year-old rookie with a world of hustle and an ingratiating grin.

Wrigley, who remarked, "We simply decided we'd have to buckle down and do something for the team," said waivers would be asked on Hartnett and that if there were no takers he would be given his unconditional release.

Several Under Consideration

"We are announcing this decision now," Wrigley said, "both out of fairness to Hartnett and because we believe the fans expect and are entitled to know what's what about their ball club. Several names are under consideration for the position of Cub manager in 1941. All the men we would like are under contract and their names cannot be discussed until we have made definite arrangements with them and their present employers."

This was taken to mean the new Cub manager would not be a Cub player, even though the name of Bill Herman second baseman, long has been mentioned as a possible club managerial possibility. William A. (Billy) Meyer, who managed the Kansas City club of the American Association last year, mentioned as a possible successor to Gabby, declined to comment when asked if he was to become manager of the Chicago club.

Hartnett, who succeeded Charlie Grimm as Cub pilot in July, 1938, and who has never worn any other major league uniform than that of the Cubs, said: "Whew! Was it a surprise! This was the first time I'd seen Wrigley since the season ended. And it's the first time I've been out of a job since I started playing ball.

To Stay in Game

"I'm going to stay in baseball—I'd do anything just to stay in the game. I have no offers or plans and I'm not going to make any phone calls, just take them when them come—if they come. This is one of those things. You can't cry or bellyache about it. I hope the next fellow has a better time of it than I did."

"Old Tomato Face," as fans and playeds have affectionately called him down through the years, caught his last full season in 1937, when in 110 games he hit .354. Through the 1939 season he had a lifetime major league plate mark of .298 and last season, appearing at bat only 62 times, he hit .274.

Both Wrigley and Hartnett were obviously ill at ease when they appeared before newsmen, Wrigley sounding the tone of the conference by remarking, "This isn't particularly pleasant—Gabby's been with the club almost a quarter century." Hartnett, whose first two names are Charles Leo, will be 40 next month.

The dismissal was another episode in the Cub's recent turbulent history. Taking up the reins from Grimm, Hartnett led the team to the 1938 National League pennant. In 1939 the Cubs finished fourth and they wobbled badly to finish fifth this past season. Wrigley recently announced he desired to give up the presidency of the club and that problem still has to be met.

McCormick Named N. L.'s Most Valuable

Cincinnati First Baseman Is Third Member of Reds to Win Rating in as Many Years; Johnny Mize Voted Second

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 13.—The Cincinnati Reds may or may not have a monopoly on the National League pennant but they apparently have a strangle-hold on the circuit's most valuable player award.

Frank McCormick, whom the Baseball Writers Association of America announced today as their selection for the 1940 award, was the third Cincinnati player in as many years to win the honor.

The hard-hitting, smooth-fielding first baseman followed the trail marked out by Catcher Ernie Lombardi in 1938 and Pitcher Bucky Walters last year.

Mize Is Second

There was some division among the committee of 24 baseball writers who made the annual selection with the result that McCormick's margin over Johnny Mize, the St. Louis Cardinal's first baseman and home run king, was only 274 points to 205. Last year Walters received 303 out of a possible 336 points.

This year Walters received 146 points and Paul Derringer, his pitching partner, 121, to finish third and fourth, respectively, in the balloting.

The Reds won their world championship this year more on team play than on the performance of any one player and since no one on the other clubs stood out head and shoulders, the difficult task of selection pretty much narrowed to finding who of the Reds contributed the most.

Stick Average Drops

McCormick, a tall, handsome youth from New York, has been a regular for three years, playing in every one of the Reds' games in that stretch. In 1938, when he broke in, he batted .326 and knocked in 106 runs. In 1939, when he rated third in the most valuable balloting, he hit .332 and drove in 126 runs. This year his average dropped to .309 but he sent 127 runs across the plate.

Obviously McCormick hasn't improved individually but has improved as a team man and during 1940, when the Reds' pitching lost some of its lustre, he was a vital factor in Cincinnati's repeating for the pennant.

McCormick received 16 of the

'You're Fired' Didn't Affect Gabby's Grin

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 13.—The broad Irish grin that has been Gabby Hartnett's baseball trade-mark for two decades didn't fail him today as he lost his first and only major league job.

He had that big grin on his red face as he greeted newsmen seconds after learning his contract as manager of the Chicago Cubs would not be renewed for 1941. And that big grin, the stock-in-trade of one of the most colorful and popular players the big time ever knew, was on his face as he talked with and then parted from the man who had told him of his dismissal, P. K. Wrigley, Cub president.

"Thanks, Leo," said Wrigley after posing for photographers with the catcher-manager who served 19 years with the Cubs.

"Thank you, Mr. Wrigley," said Hartnett quietly. And then, seemingly unable to suppress the Irish in him a moment longer:

"Not for firing me," he said with a hearty laugh, "but thanks for coming down from your upstairs office!"

That laugh and grin, backing up a great competitive heart full of baseball hustle, was just as much a part of Charles Leo Hartnett on the field as were his big bat, chest protector, mask and cocky waddle to the plate. The fans loved his manner on the diamond—his sweeping hand wave to the stands, his bellows to the umpires on close plays and his big clenched fist which shot into the air like a miniature derrick after an opponent's strikeout.

Chatter Chat Wins Hunter Title at Garden

Mare Chilena Is Killed While Being Schooled

By Anne Hagner

Madison Square Garden, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Closing-night glamour greatly dimmed by the tragic death of Maj. Eduardo Yanez' favorite mount, Chilena, the National Horse Show moved into its final session here tonight with Mrs. Ellsworth Augustus' Chatter Chat crowned hunter champion for the Willoughby, Ohio, stable over Samel Weiss' Irish importation, Shamrock.

Tricolor pinnings took a back seat in importance to the Chilean jumping mare's fatal accident early today while schooling over a triple bar fence in preparation for tonight's International Military Team finals.

Because Maj. Yanez was still suffering from arm injuries received yesterday when his Toqui ran under a single pole, Chilena was being schooled by Capt. Armando Fernandez, another member of the Chilean delegation. The gallant little bay landed directly in the middle of the set of bars and fell forward on her head, with no room for a slide that might have made the fall less serious.

Broke Breast Bone

Chilena was taken directly down the ramp to the stables, where she collapsed to the floor, gave one final nicker, and died. Maj. Yanez was pulled away from the mare by his teammates. It was later found that her breastbone was broken.

Burial will be held tomorrow at Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island, with full military honors. A monument will be erected over her grave, in memory to the two-time winner of the Bowman Challenge Trophy at the 1938 and 1939 Nationals, 1935 Pan-American Trophy victor at the Inter-American sho win Washington, and countless other top awards.

Although the accident was the biggest excitement of the day's proceedings, Fort Myer's Capt. Charles

Ballyhoo Rates Hoyas, Boston College as Tops

News From Tulane Tabs B. C. as Better Than Aggies; Syracuse Boys State G. U. Could Spot Cornell Pair of Touchdowns

By Jack Munhall

The flood gates of ballyhoo on the Georgetown-Boston College game have burst wide open and, sluicing through the Nation's newsprints, are terrifying stories anent the terrific power and speed of the Hoyas and the Eagles.

From Tulane we hear that Boston College is rated a better team than the Texas Aggies, and from Syracuse we learn that Georgetown could spot Cornell a couple of touchdowns and lick 'em with its second team.

If half the reports that are seeping into Boston and into Washington were believed by either team, chances are there would be no football game at Fenway Park Saturday afternoon, for that team would not dare show up.

More Questions Asked

How could Georgetown combat a guy like Charlie O'Rourke who quick-kicks longer than Sammy Baugh and who is downright disgusted whenever one of his passes is not completed for a touchdown? Or how could Georgetown expect to make any gains whatsoever through a Boston College line that is manned by four-armed monsters who are called runts if they don't stand 6 feet 5 and weigh at least 250 pounds?

Still how would Boston College fare against a Georgetown squad that is bigger than the Redskins, tougher than the Chicago Bears and faster than an Olympic sprint medley team? How could the Eagles tackle Hoya backs like Lou Ghecas and Jack Doolan who run so rapidly that all they leave to be tackled is their shadows? Yet again how would the Boston College attack function against a Georgetown line that charges so hard and so quickly that they intercept enemy passes from center?

If you've wondered just how much reports impress a college team which, after all, is made up of youngsters 21 and 22 years old who are as impressionable as most kids their age, then you'd like to hear a statement from Joe McFadden, Georgetown's splendid quarterback.

McFadden Speaks

Simple and direct are his words, but how much truth they carry:

"We believe we have a great team at Georgetown. But it is not inconceivable that we may lose to Boston College. However, be assured that we will not be beaten unless B. C. is as good on the field as it is in the newspapers."

That typifies the spirit of this Georgetown team which has seen in Boston papers predictions that it will lose by three and four touchdowns. They're confident of their ability to give battle to anybody, but not so smug as to believe they're invincible.

Eighteen Georgetown players have never been on a losing team in college. Unbeaten as freshmen, they have since bowled over every varsity opponent save Syracuse, which gained a 13-to-13 tie last year. How then can you sell such a team short? Until they're beaten they could be condoned for believing they cannot be beaten. At least, until then, how do you know how good they are?

2 Princeton Varsity Ends Suspended

By International News Service

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 13.—With the hallowed Yale game coming up Saturday, Thatcher Longstreth and James Aubrey, jr., Princeton's varsity ends, have been suspended from the squad "because of insubordination."

Coach Tad Wieman explained the suspensions, but denied that there was any dissension among the Princeton players.

"Longstreth and Aubrey were suspended because of insubordination to the best interests of the team, and the suspensions were effected with the approval of the team," Wieman said.

Wieman also denied that there was any connection between incidents leading to the banning of the seniors, both letter men in 1938 and last season.

The Tiger coach said Longstreth was suspended following the Harvard game ten days ago for infraction oft raining rules, and Aubrey was asked to withdraw from the team Monday after the Penn game for lack of cooperation.

Kenneth Fairman, graduate manager of athletics, said both cases were the "result of disappointment because the players couldn't attain their former form."

Williamson Picks Hoyas Over Boston C.

By Paul B. Williamson
Noted Football Selector

College game of the week is the meeting of Georgetown with Boston College in a collision of undefeated, untied powerhouses at Boston Saturday.

On the strength of the ratings we'll take Jack Hagerty's Hoyas over Frank Leahy's Eagles, and figure that a "bowl" contender will be decided in this one.

In the two other outstanding attractions of the week-end Michigan will defeat Northwestern, and the surprising Indians of Stanford will take Oregon State, according to the figures in our book. If Stanford gets over this hurdle it looks like a sure Rose Bowl bid for last year's Coast cellarites.

Major Selections

In major circles we'll take Auburn over L. S. U., Tulsa over Baylor, California over Oregon in a very close game, Navy over Columbia in another hairline decision, and Brown over Harvard.

The ratings say Nebraska will take Pittsburgh by one or more touchdowns and that Princeton will trim Yale.

Among other leaders we pick: Arizona over Loyola of California Hardin-Simmons (who ever heard of them a few years ago) over Catholic University, Alabama over Georgia Tech, Temple over Holy Cross, Villanova over Manhattan in another close, Michigan State over Marquette, Florida over Miami of Florida, Indiana over Wisconsin, Texas over T. C. U., also close, Tulane over Georgia, Washington State over U. C. L. A., Utah over Colorado State, to decide the championship of the Big Seven. On Sunday a very brave prediction is St. Mary's over California.

Colorado to Win

Finishing up the big boys we'll take Colorado over Brigham Young. Denver over Utah State, close. Franklin Marshall over Carnegie Tech, a minor over a major, San Jose State over Fresno State, George Washington over Kansas, Syracuse over Colgate, and Montana over those remarkable San Diego Marines.

Best games in the minor circuits will be Daytona over Ohio University, and Marshall over Xavier of Cincinnati.

Other close minor games will be Williams over Amherst, Toledo over Butler, Grinnell over Coe, Denton over Commerce, Idaho over Nevada, Ohio Wesleyan over Youngstown, Wyoming over Wichita, and Providence over St. Anselm.

The very close minor games should be Occidental, with a rating

Francis Reagan Joins Tom Harmon In Charity Game

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Nov. 13.—Francis Reagan, University of Pennsylvania's great halfback, was named today as a teammate of Michigan's Tom Harmon for the East-West charity football game here New Year's day.

The Pennsylvania flyer's acceptance of an invitation to play in the annual classic bringing together many of the Nation's stars for the Shriners' Crippled Children's Hospital, was relayed from Andy Kerr, of Colgate University, head coach of the Eastern squad. Harmon accepted an invitation previously.

Game officials said other acceptances would be reported after November 30, when the main college schedules are completed in this section.

5 Sophs May Start For Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., Nov. 13 (AP).—Coach Harry Stuhldreher had five sophomores in his Wisconsin first string forward wall tonight at the end of a dummy defensive drill and there is a possibility that all may start against Indiana Saturday.

Pat Lyons and Dave Schreiner, ends; Dick Thornally and Lloyd Wasserbach, tackles, and John Roberts, right guard, were the sophs to crash the line-up. After a punting and passing drill, Stuhldreher took his men indoors for practice against Hoosier running plays.

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Operative Z-2 has this day checked in with a full report on the Boston College football team. We are transmitting the essence of it herewith to Georgetown Coach Jack Hagerty for any action his team might care to take on Saturday afternoon at Boston.

Shedding three layers of disguise and revealing himself as our No. One man in the counter-espionage against Boston College, Z-2 began to babble. "Pardon me, Chief, if I am still slightly pop-eyed," he panted, "but I have just seen the most amazing football team these eyes have ever beheld. Georgetown's first mistake on Saturday afternoon will be showing up for the opening kick-off."

Calm yourself, please, and remember, my man, that you haven't seen Georgetown yet. Jack has a team that plays considerable football, too. What does Boston College have that Georgetown doesn't. After all, Boston College is human."

"Don't be too sure of that, Boss," exclaimed Z-2. "It's positively supernatural the way they score some of their touchdowns. I saw 'em make plays when it looked as if every man in their backfield had a ball. That's what Manhattan thought two weeks ago. Against B. C. the big job is not stopping the man with the ball, its finding the man with the ball."

All right, all right, but I understand Boston College is shy of reserves. After Georgetown cuffs their first team around, we'll murder the B. C. second team.

"Don't count on that, Chief. Listen, I was just trying to tell you that it was the B. C. second team that scored all those touchdowns against Manhattan. And besides, you ought to see Toczylowski."

Who?

"Henry Toczylowski, that's who. I've been tailing him for three weeks. Five feet 9 inches, 180 pounds, scar on right forehead, specializes as a blocking back and will knock you down on sight. He's dangerous because . . ."

Because what?

"He's dangerous because he doesn't want any of the glory of carrying the ball. Toczylowski is a strange case who is content to be a blocking back. He gets a fiendish delight out of laying out two and three men on every play. He plays 60 minutes. He's an honor student in classes and he calls the signals. They don't have to wig-wag from the bench when Toczylowski is out there."

Where did this Toczylowski come from, Z-2?

"He's a Boston boy. He's the Toczylowski who didn't get away." Don't give me riddles, Z-2. Whaddayamean he's the Toczylowski who didn't get away?

"Well, you see it's like this. He comes from a long line of tough, smart football players around Boston. A Big Ten college grabbed his brother for its backfield. A cousin is paying quarterback for L. S. U. Henry is the Toczylowski who didn't get away."

What else do you know about this Boston College team?

"Plenty. In the first place it's screwy. It is—"

Screwy? What do you mean by that, or are you daft?

"I'm not but that Boston College team acts like it is sometimes. They get a lot of fun out of playing this game. I had my glasses on 'em in their huddles and you'd think Toczylowski was telling funny stories the way they were laughing. They don't seem to take it seriously until the ball is snapped. Then anything is liable to happen including touchdowns."

Why does Coach Frank Leahy stand for that foolishness?

"As long as his team wins ball games, it's all right with Leahy. I heard that they scored three touchdowns this season on plays Leahy never saw before. They just think them up themselves while they're in those huddles. Leahy doesn't know when they're going to lateral pass for example, and neither do they until somebody suddenly finds himself with the ball.

Who do we have to watch besides this Toczylowski? Don't tell me they have more of his ilk.

"Not exactly, Chief, but they've got the greatest forward passer in the colleges and one tackle so handsome that you'd never suspect he's a great football player. I told you I didn't know if this team was human. Wait till you see Charley O'Rourke. He throws the passes and does most of the running. He's positively ghost-like."

Keep spiritualism out of this and tell me about O'Rourke.

"If you want to know what O'Rourke looks like, Chief, you'll have to think of a ghost. He's tall and skinny. He's pale and he looks sickly. He doesn't look like he belongs on a football field, until he gets the ball from center. Then he's like a wraith. He's dynamite whether he's throwing the ball or carrying it."

And this handsome tackle, who's he?

"That's Joe Manzo. Just when the opposing linemen think it's a shame to muss up his good looks, he's dumping 'em on their ears and getting your ball carrier. People who know about B. C. don't run plays at Manzo's side of the line."

What else do you know about this Boston College team?

"I know they can't be trusted. I've seen 'em lose 20 yards on three downs and gain 40 on fourth down. They love to gamble for that one play that goes all the way. Honest, they——"

Stop shaking, Z-2, you're not going to be in this ball game.

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 13.—Roger Peckinpaugh's appointment as manager of the Cleveland Indians possibly may not be as crackpotty as it seemed at the time of the announcement. Alva Bradley, the willy-nilly owner, has a soft spot in his head for Peck, who was Bradley's first manager. But, in addition to that, he may have deliberately chosen Peck because Roger lacks all the fire and spirit which the public usually ascribes to managers.

CONSIDINE

Peck may be Bradley's remedy to soothe the raw, bleeding nerves of the team's insurrectors. Peck is quiet, humble, inconspicuous, and not given to the colorful type of newspaper interviews, a la Vitt. He will submerge himself in the team, rather than get out there in front and wave it on. If the meek inherit pennants, as well as the earth, maybe he will be hailed as a wonder-man next October. For he's certainly meek.

He now has the best team in baseball. It is inconceivable that Hal Trosky, and the other sensitive plants on the squad who were turned into anguished bundles of nerves by Vitt's ragging, will ever find cause to become upset by Peck. Perhaps Peck's appeasing manner will bring about the desired order on the team. If it does, Bradley will have provided a neat, if roundabout, solution to Cleveland's baseball woes.

It surprised us to read that Peck was given a two-year contract. Cleveland has been giving one-year contracts to its managers because of the philosophy which Bradley expressed at the time he fired Peck in 1933: "The owner only hires the manager; the public fires him." The chronically impatient Cleveland public, at that rate has since 1933 fired Peck, Walter Johnson, Steve O'Neill and Oscar Vitt. If the public decided to fire Peck in midseason of 1941, therefore, Bradley will have to pay him off for the rest of the year and for 1942.

It is doubtful if the same kind of contract was offered to Bucky Harris. Else, Harris would have taken it. Harris, we thought, would have been the reasonable way to clear up the Cleveland chaos. He has picked up a serviceable drawing room veneer since he left the Pennsylvania coal mine regions 20-odd and often exciting years ago. But about a quarter of an inch below that surface Harris is still as tough a bloke as can be found in sport. He would have demanded rudely of Cleveland's players that they pull in one direction, and taken a bat to whomever questioned his authority. He would have been equally certain that neither Bradley nor Alexander Throttlebottom Slapnicka, the team's vice president, nosed into the way he ran his club or dealt with rebellionists.

We thought Cleveland needed a strong man. Perhaps it will turn out that it needed a more resilient one—one who by nature is more inclined to pacify press, player and business office poobah. We hope so for Peck's sake, for he is a fine guy. His Cleveland teams of 1928-1933 played little better than .500 ball and finished third, on the average. But this is a better team than he had then. With the ancient Tigers balked from making any big league deals, and the Yanks in a state of flux, he should waltz into the pennant over the soothing

Augie Lio Named Captain for Battle

Georgetown, forced indoors by rain for the second time in three days, yesterday continued preparations with Boston College and named Augie Lio, senior guard, as captain for the game.

An East Boston boy, Lio has a host of friends in Beantown and was delighted with the honor.

The Georgetown squad, 36 strong, will entrain from Union Station at 9 o'clock tonight and arrive in Boston early Friday morning. An afternoon workout is scheduled for Fenway Park, scene of Saturday's game. The Hoya contingent will establish headquarters at Hotel Sheraton.

Farkas' Eligibility May Shove Edwards Or Sanford to Inactive List

By Al Hailey

The question of whether Andy Farkas, Redskin fullback recovering from a preseason knee operation, will don his uniform for his first taste of action this year Sunday against the Chicago Bears will be decided definitely this morning, Coach Ray Flaherty announced yesterday.

Farkas, who just last spring signed a five-year contract with the Skins, has been showing steady improvement since he started working out with the club almost a month ago but he hasn't been doing much running this week because of rain which made footing at the ball park too dangerous to take any chances.

If Farkas is made eligible for the Bears game Turk Edwards or Rookie Sandy Sanford, both suffering from injuries, will be put on the inactive list, with all indications pointing to the former.

Farkas Is Needed

Farkas' return to the Redskin lineup would greatly strengthen the running attack, which, partly because of Sammy Baugh's almost continuous passing, gained only 19 yards against the Dodgers in last Sunday's upset in Brooklyn.

One of the most powerful runners in the National Pro League and possessing a deceptive change of pace, Farkas led the league last year in scoring.

As if to make up for Farkas' absence this year, Jimmy Johnston and Dick Todd have taken over the National League's scoring race and are tied again this week for first place with seven touchdowns each for 42 points.

Masterson Fourth

Bob Masterson, veteran end, has moved up into fourth place in the scoring race behind Green Bay's Don Hutson with four touchdowns and 13 extra points for a total of 40 points.

The Redskins' inimitable Mr. Baugh still dominates the forward passing picture with a 65 per cent efficiency average, while Frank Filchock and Detroit's Cotton Price are tied for fifth with 51 per cent.

Just to make life tough for the Bears, the Redskins have the league's third and fourth best pass receivers in Jimmy Johnston with 24, Todd and Wayne Millner, with 19 catches each, are tied for fourth. Don Looney, Philadelphia rookie, and Don Hutson, the Packers' great end, are first and second respectively in the pass catching race.

Reds Watch Baugh

In view of the Redskins' dangerous passing game, the Bears are working frantically this week to perfect a defense against the tosses of Baugh and Filchock. Detroit's Price passed the Lions to an upset 17-14 victory over the Bears last week, completing 9 out of 12 in the last quarter, and the New York Giants worked up three touchdowns against the Chicagoans October 27.

Incidentally, the Bears' Sid Luckman is tied with Green Bay's Cecil Isbell for third place with 35 com-

Storck Calls Meeting Here To Map Playoff

Confab Listed Monday At Mayflower Hotel; Six Teams Invited

By the Associated Press

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 13.—President Carl L. Storck, of the National Pro Football League announced tonight he had called a special meeting for next Monday at 12:30 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel at Washington to map tentative plans for the championship play-off.

This game between the Eastern and Western divisional leaders is Scheduled for Sunday December 8, on the home grounds of the Eastern club.

Storck said representatives of six teams, the Champion Green Bay Packers, Chicago Bears, Detroit Lions, Washington Redskins, New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers, all with chances to gain the play-off had been invited to the conference.

Upsets last Sunday put the divisional races in doubt, leaving the Bears leading in the West by a single game and Washington in the East by two games.

In case of a deadlock in either division at the end of the regular schedule, the tie would have to be played off and a later date set for the league championship contest.

Personal Appearances Arranged for Redskins

Hardin-Simmons' Clippings Forecast Dire Things for C. U.

Undefeated Texans Invade Brookland Saturday; Boast Great Passing Attack

If Catholic University Coach Dutch Bergman wants to impress his charges as to just how tough the Hardin-Simmons gridders are, well he should consult a couple of last week's Los Angeles papers.

The Coast sportswriters went hook, line and sinker for the unbeaten Texans, who meet Catholic University here in Brookland Stadium Saturday afternoon.

Some of the quotes included "one of the finest passing attacks ever shown here." "Pass throwing perfection." Another said: "One of the throwin'est clubs to perform here in years," and still another "we didn't figure the Cowboys would complete 16 out of 30 passes."

Get Out of Town, C. U.

The flowery tributes followed Hardin-Simmons' 40-6 rout of Loyola University of Los Angeles. One reporter went as far as to phrase a personal warning to Catholic U., to look out for "those pitchin', buckin,' rarin' and wild runnin' Cowboys."

Bergman had pass defense in mind yesterday but the weather man vetoed any such ideas and the Cards were forced indoors.

The Hardin-Simmons team will leave Abilene, Tex., today for Washington, and will stop over in Dallas for a short workout. They arrived home only yesterday from Los Angeles.

Special Texas Section

A special Hardin-Simmons alumni section has been set aside on the 50-yard line, and seats in the Texas section are on sale at A. A. A. and Henderson's, at Fourteenth and New York Avenue Northwest.

C. U. will be outweighed both in the backfield and the line this week, but it is nothing new, for the Cardinals entered the Tulsa game with a 10-pound deficit on the line and an average of 8 pounds lighter in the backfield. The visiting Cowboys will boast about the same weight advantage.

Heaviest players among the visitors are John Treadway, 235-pound right tackle while the biggest back is Moon Mullins, the 204-pound pile driver who must be watched when L. B. Russell and "Goody" Goodnight are not rifling passes.

The game will provide C. U. with a chance for national recognition as due to their widely scattered opposition the Cowboys have become know from coast to coast as they compiled the 10-game winning streak.

American U. Aims for Game With Juniata

Eagles Hope for Victory Here Before Homecoming Fans

Shoot the works is the theme out American University way this week as the Eagles prepare for Saturday's home-coming game with Juniata College, of Huntingdon, Pa.

Coach Staff Cassell and George Menke, his assistant, have installed an offensive into the Eagles despite their losses this season, scoring 13 points against Susquehanna and Randolph Macon in defeat, while in the 0-0 tie with Johns Hopkins, the Eagles gained some 350 yards.

The mentors hope to merge offense and defense against the Pennsylvanians and give the expected 3,500 fans the first American U. home-coming triumph in several years. The visitors have won three, lost one and tied one this season.

It will be the final game for three Eagle seniors, Hugh Schulze, end, Capt. Jablonski, tackle, and Archie Norford, halfback. Ken Fox, the junior linesman who was injured in the Randolph Macon game, may be in shape.

This Sitting Job Gets Monotonous, So Jorgens Quits

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov 13—Arndt Jorgens, veteran New York Yankee reserve catcher, today notified President E. Barrow that he was retiring from baseball.

JORGENS

From his Wilmette, Ill., home, the 34-year-old receiver wrote that he was giving up baseball to go into business with his father-in-law. Jorgens, who hasn't caught a game in two years, joined the Yankee organization in 1928 and after being farmed out twice came back to stay, most of the time on the bench, in 1930. Though seeing little action, Jorgens collected full shares from five world championships.

Maryland Holds Light Drill for V. M. I. Game

Terps Nursing Injuries Received In Hoya Clash

Injuries and a general shaking up received in the Georgetown game held the University of Maryland gridders down to a light workout yesterday as the club prepared for its Southern Conference game of the year Saturday, with V. M. I. as the opposition.

The Terps will leave here Friday for Lynchburg, the neutral site of the annual contest with the Keydets.

The two-man offensive of the Terps, Joe Murphy and Mearle DuVall, took it easy yesterday, while Joe Goopengardner did not don a uniform as he has been declared out of the V. M. I. game. He may not be back for Rutgers and Washington and Lee due to his knee injury.

Despite their record of five defeats in six games, Maryland stands a chance of breaking even in conference football standings this year due to a novel bit of schedule making. They play only two games and will be underdogs against V. M. I., but should be at least even money against the Generals, who have been also on the short end of most scores.

Kansas Shows Statistics Edge in George Washington Series

G. W. Holds Game Margin In Victories

Reinhart's Eleven Host to Kansans Saturday at 2 P. M.; Rivals Leave Today

Statistics from the University of Kansas dwell at length on how the Jayhawks have outgained, outpassed and out-first-downed Georgia Washington for the last two years. They go on to predict that the Kansans will duplicate their previous performances here Saturday in Griffith Stadium in the fourth and last game of the present intersectional series.

What they fail to get around to until the second page is that they haven't paid off on statistics in this series, as G. W. won 9 to 7, in 1938 here, and 14 to 7 last year in Lawrence, Kan.

Tony Barauskas was the hero of the 9-to-7 triumph, blocking a kick in the last quarter that bounded through the end zone for an automatic safety. In that game K. U. made 13 first downs to 5 and netted 335 yards to G. W.'s 132. Barauskas will start this week.

G. W. Won Last Year

Last year when Tom Grady first broke into a starring role, G. W. won, 14 to 7, but Kansas showed a 17-to-9 edge in first downs and a yardage edge with a total of 354.

The only Kansas victory in the series thus far was pushed over in 1934, when they beat G. W. here, 7 to 0, two days after they beat Missouri, 27 to 0.

The Kansans, on the bottom of the Big Six standings, reached their peak last week in holding Oklahoma scoreless until the fourth period, before losing, 14 to 0.

While the Jayhawks are apparently on the way up before closing the season with G. W., Missouri and Colorado State, Coach Bill Reinhart is having trouble with his Colonials due to the injury jinx that has left his squad crippled one way or another since the first half of the Manhattan game.

Colonials in Drill

Sam Babich, the regular quarterback and the most potent member of the regular backfield, missed the first game of his varsity career against Wake Forest and last week against Bucknell he wasn't even in uniform.

A lot depends on whether Babich will be in shape this week for the Jayhawks. His chances of playing were still undetermined yesterday.

A scoring punch in scoring territory was the theme of the latest G. W. workout, abbreviated by the continued rain.

The Kansans will leave Lawrence today, on their second Eastern trip in two weeks. They lost to Villanova in Philadelphia.

Hunting Season Opens Tomorrow In Montgomery

The regular hunting season, during which it will be lawful to kill quail, rabbits, pheasants, wild turkeys, ruffed grouse and doves, begins in Montgomery County tomorrow to continue through December 31. The season for shooting woodcock in the county also starts tomorrow and will close November 29. Killing of squirrels during the regular season is forbidden, the open season for them being from September 15 to October 15, both inclusive.

The daily bag limits for the various kinds of game follow: Quail, 6; rabbits, 6; woodcock, 4; doves, 12; pheasants and grouse, 2, not over 6 during season; wild turkey, 1, not more than 4 during season.

The new arrival is a boy and is the Martin's first child. Mrs. Martin is the former Miss Louise Cornwell, of Sedley, Va.

Navy Holds Last Heavy Work for Lions

Middies to Be at Full Strength for Columbia Saturday in New York

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 13.—Anxious to redeem themselves for two consecutive lickings by powerful Pennsylvania and Notre Dame, Navy's football stalwarts worked hard at their last heavy practice today for the Columbia Lions Saturday at New York.

Although several players haven't been able to practice this week because of injuries, indications are that the Middies will be at full strength for the Gothamites.

Four backs—Cliff Lenz, Wes Gebert, Sammy Boothe and Howard Clark—have been out of action with injuries but are expected to be available Saturday.

Willis Maxon, regular right end out for some time with a gridiron ailment, has replaced Lars Wanggaard at the wing position on the second eleven. Wanggaard hurt his back in the Notre Dame encounter.

Head Coach Swede Larson said he would announce tomorrow whether he would start his first or second team against Columbia. Larson considers his two outfits "my team."

Brother of Fastest Trotter Purchased

Indianapolis, Nov. 13 (AP).—Mrs. James D. Johnston, of Detroit, purchased Grey Fox, yearling full brother of Greyhound, the world's fastest trotter, for $6,100 today at the annual Indianapolis trotting and pacing horse auction sale.

This was said to be the highest price of the fall season for a yearling standard-bred horse. The successful bid actually was made by Sep Palin, Greyhound's mentor ever since he was sold here in 1933.

Rain Postpones Golf Tourney at Pinehurst

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 13. (AP).—The final round of the 36-hole Mid-South Golf Tournament will be played tomorrow, weather permitting. Rain drenched the championship course today.

Clayton Heafner, of Linville and Ed Oliver, of Hornell, N. Y., were on yesterday's low team, which came through with a 32-32—64. The two pros were only one shot below a couple of amateurs, Richard D. Chapman, national titlist, and Jim Ferrier, the Australian ace.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

ACKERMAN

In fishing, even when a stream, or any area, has been heavily fished, there is always the possibility of another whopper lurking somewhere in the depths to be hooked, played and landed. Returned to its native element, it is an investment by the angler in his sport, whereby he may enjoy, day after day and year after year, good fishing.

In hunting, when a field is swept clean of game, the sport is ended; when you pull the trigger there is no chance of "eating your cake and keeping it, too." It is up to every sportsman to see that he leaves as much, or more, than is killed, as an investment in hunting.

In a recent article Col. H. P. Sheldon called attention of hunters to the fact that the carelessly crippled birds would in themselves amount to a considerable number if it were possible to carry them over as brood stock. And the careless crippling of game is not limited to wildfowl, for quail experts estimate from 10 to 15 per cent more birds crippled than are bagged.

The estimated kill of quail last season was approximately 1,000,000. That would mean from 100,000 to 150,000 birds that the hunters did not recover and therefore were a dead loss.

Col. Sheldon urged hunters to "kill clean"—that the use of long-range cartridges and shells be confined to producing "cleaner kills at normal ranges, not in attempts to make long-range hits."

That would be a considerable investment if all hunters were to follow it, but it seems as though it is just something everyone has to learn first-hand.

Ima Hunter, which appears to be a nom-de-convenience—but a very helpful one nevertheless—calls attention to our spelling of Currituck with an a in place of the i. We consider ourself corrected for becoming too familiar with a word we have known, and loved that for which it stands, these many years.

Field biologists of the Virginia Game Commission have signed up 437 small refuges, totaling 30,558 acres, as part of the quail restoration project recently inaugurated and made possible by the Pittman-Robertson Act.

In addition to providing small refuges designed to insure the safe survival of an adequate brood stock, the project provides for the restocking of areas where brood stock is not present.

Areas selected are chosen with a view to the surrounding country as a shooting area capable of supporting the overflow of quail from the refuges, thus making better shooting from a constant supply, and with no chance of hunters "spending" any part of their capital stock. A swell investment, we call it.

Landowners are encouraged to provide adequate food and cover for the birds, by protecting vegetation from grazing and by planting food and cover strips. Which, by cooperation with hunters, can become a good investment for them.

O'Donough Rolls High Set at Arcadia

Ties With Anderson For Game Record; Burke, Payne Star

Al O'Donough, L. P. Steuart and John Anderson, Arcade Pontiac, tied for high game with 146 in the Washington Automotive League last night at the Ice Palace, with the former taking the high set with 406. Pohanka Service, L. P. Steuart and Wolfe Motor rolled a three-way tie for high team game with 576 each, with the Steuart boys winning out for set honors with 1,688. Arcade Pontiac leads with 25 and 2, followed by Emerson & Orme, 18 and 9, and L. P. Steuart with 16 and 11.

Bill Burke, Jimmie's Grill, and Al Payne, Eastern Pharmacy, were the big shots in the Temple Minor meet at Northeast Temple, with highs for game and set of 149 and 378, respectively. The I. C. E. Club lads took team game with 615, but had to let the Eastern Pharmacy quintet get the set honors with a 1,654 pinfall. New Deal Men's Shop, Camden Tavern and Wolf's Market won all three games from opponents. Loggia Roma leads with 22 and 5.

Rip Sole took high individual game in the Southeastern loop's meet at Queen Pin with 144, while Turnburke, Shaffer Flowers, garnered the set mark with 375. The Quality Shop lads took all the team highs with 616 and 1,781 and whitewashed A. B. Price. Rosson Motor captured the odd game from Tommy Tucker's Tavern with the aid of Polly Hayes' 366.

The Washington Post boys at Convention Hall saw George Becker, No. 5, and McGredy, No. 6, take the honors for game and set with 158 and 355, respectively. Team No. 7 garnered highs with 592 and 1,623 as well as all its games from No. 10. Teams No. 3 and No. 4 whitewashed No. 6 and No. 2 in the order named. No. 12 is still in the lead with 22-11 with Nos. 8 and 10 tied for second with 20-13.

Dave Groth, Shadid's Restaurant, took high game of 152 in the Brookland Merchants' loop's meet while Henry May, Hamilton Decorating, went wild on the drives and rolled a 404 set. The M. P. M. Marke lads captured all team highs with 626 and 1,744. University Delicatessen is out in front by three games over Hite's Shell. Wally Bloyer, Hite's Shell, had a near-high set of 395.

Miss Goetz, L. & C. No. 1, was the leading lady of the Treasury Ladies' meet at Columbia, rolling high game and set with 128-338, although Miss Kersten, league high average bowlerette, tied her on the set figure. Procurement No. 2 took team game with 517 with L. & C. No. 4 coming through for high set with 1,462.

All-American Honors Likely For Two Hoyas

Matuza and Reichey Mentioned Among Outstanding Centers

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 13.—Calling the roll on outstanding line candidates for the All-America football team:

The toughest spot to fill this year apparently will be center, where competition is wide open. The East has a flock of good pivot men, among them Leon Gajecki, of Penn State; Don Snavely, of Columbia; Chet Gladchuk, Boston College 240-pounder; Georgetown's duo of Allen Matuza and Jim Reichey; Frank Finneran, Cornell ball-hawk; Spencer Moseley, of Yale, a sensation against Cornell last week; Bill Gillis, of Army; Ray Frick, of Penn; Lou de Filippo, of Fordham; Ed Simms, of Navy, and Burgy Ayres, of Harvard.

Mucha Impressive

Rudy Mucha, of Washington, a 57-minute defensive ace against Stanford last week, looks like the class of the Far West with Stanford's Vic Lindskog up there or thereabouts. Paul Hiemenz of Northwestern and Claude White of Ohio State are the Western Conference's leading candidates, while Marquette's Ray Apolskis likewise is highly rated. In the Big Six, Center Don Pierce of Kansas is a powerful figure on an otherwise unimpressive ball club. Cliff Speegle of Oklahoma is another good one. Topping the Big Seven are Frank Scott of Denver and Murray Maughan of Utah State.

Another hot fight has developed over the end positions. Stock of the Southern Conference leaders, Paul Severin of North Carolina and Joe Blalock of Clemson, took a sharp drop last week. Severin, an All-America last year, has been handicapped by injuries for several weeks and failed to play as North Carolina was upset by Richmond. Some critics were disappointed in Blalock's play against Auburn.

Plays Despite Injury

Rising briskly to the occasion, however, were a number of other ends including Alabama's great pair of Captain Hal Newman and Holt Rast; Buddy Elrod, Mississippi State, who played bang-up football against Louisiana State despite a cast on a broken hand; Dave Rankin, of Purdue, whose flank was avoided by Fordham's runners; Bob Steuber, Missouri youngster; Ed Frutig, of Michigan, superb on defense and offense against Minnesota, and Alex Urban, of South Carolina.

Also attracting attention among linemen last week were:

Tackles: Sears, Oregon State; Stuart, Oregon; Hartman, Rice; Routt, Texas A. and M.; Preston, Wake Forest; Gallagher, Notre Dame; Drahos, Cornell; Flathmann, Navy; Fronczek, Richmond; Weiner, Kansas State; Behm and Herndon, Nebraska; Enich, Iowa; Bauman, Northwestern; Uremovich, Indiana; Reinhard, California; Spendlove, Utah; Oliver, Colorado; Ungerer and Kuzman, Fordham; Neff, Purdue; Odson, Minnesota; Makofske, Columbia.

Guards: Alfson and Schwartzkopf, Nebraska; Frankowski, Washington; Younce, Oregon State; Kemnitz, Marquette; Robnett, Texas A. and M.; Simington, Askansas; Givler, Wake Forest; Caton, North Carolina State; Karmazin, Duke; O'Boyle, Tulane; Goree, Louisiana State; Lahar, Oklahoma; Ethington, Iowa State; Geary, Utah; Scheffel, Denver; Mori, Penn State; Batista, Florida; Ardillo, Auburn; Pukema, Minnesota; Faircloth, North Carolina; Young, Dartmouth; Peabody, Harvard; Mendelson, Penn; Burnham and Dern, Yale.

Dusek, O'Toole Headline Mat Card Tonight

Wrestlers Fought To Draw Last Week; Five Bouts Carded

Emil Dusek, another of the hard-boiled Nebraska "Riot Squad" boys, and Tommy O'Toole, popular Irish grappler, will headline tonight's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

They will pick up where they left off last week when the timekeeper ended hostilities after 30 minutes. The draw just didn't satisfy either of the participants—nor the crowd, and, as a result Promoter Joe Turner ordered the rematch.

O'Toole has met all the other Duseks. Usually a scientific grappler, Tommy can use his two fists to good advantage, for before he took up wrestling he was a professional prize fighter in Arizona as a stablemate of John Henry Lewis, former champion.

Semiwindup honors will be turned over to "Gentleman Lou" Plummer and Paul Boesch, of California. Plummer lost a bruising battle to Joe Cox last week.

A special brawl finds Lew Simmons, 225-pound new comer from Boston, engaging Warren Bockwinkle, St. Louis flash, while other bouts show Herbie Freeman against Milo Steinborn and Chriz Zaharias against Abe Yourist.

The opening bout is at 8:30.

Walsh, Doolan, Baugh Honored by Grid Club

Touchdown Club members selected the outstanding high school, college and professional players of the week at their annual luncheon.

Jackie Walsh, Tech, was the scholastic gridder honored for his outstanding performance against Eastern while Jack Doolan, Georgetown, was picked over the collegiate gridders and Sammy Baugh was named among the Redskins. Doolan scored twice against Maryland while Baugh broke the league record against Brooklyn.

Boston, Baltimore Play 1-1 Tie on Ice

Baltimore, Nov. 13 (AP).—Boston's Olympics and Baltimore Orioles battled to a 1-1 overtime tie in the opening game of the Eastern Hockey League season tonight.

Five Boston players, flying here for the game, were fogbound long enough to keep them out of play until the third period.

Wolverines' Hopes Against Wildcats Renewed by Return

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 13.—Michigan's football picture brightened today with the return of All-America Halfback Tom Harmon to practice and news that Al Wistert, brilliant 210-pound sophomore tackle, would be ready to play Saturday in the final home game against Northwestern.

Harmon, who spent the last two nights in a hospital for treatment of a bruised leg, took an active part in the drill. Wistert has complained of headaches since injured in last week's game with Minnesota, but doctors said they could find no evidence of concussion.

Coach Fritz Crisler warned the Wolverines that sharp tackling would be the only way to stop the fleet Wildcat backs.

Eagles and Capitols Battle to Deadlock

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 13 (AP).—The New Haven Eagles and Indianapolis Capitols battled to a 2-all deadlock tonight in a hard-fought American Hockey League battle which was featured by a whirlwind third period when three of the goals were made.

Myles sent the Eagles in front early in the opening session, a lead they held until near the six minute mark in the third period when H. Kilrea tied the count. McAtee put the Capitols ahead in 17:22 only to have Willson even up matters in 18:30.

Gopher Gridders Workout in Snow

Minneapolis, Nov. 13 (AP).—Minnesota got back one of its missing football players today, Bruce Smith, outstanding back, who was laid out, not by illness or injury, but by storm. He was marooned at his Faribault home.

Inability to practice outdoors—the field was covered by more than a foot of snow—worried Coach Bierman, who figured that Purdue might be laying back for a chance to knock off the country's No. 1 team. What workout the Gophers could accomplish in the field house was directed at Purdue's highly developed passing and running attack.

Pros Reelect Tom Walsh As President

Sprogell Elected Secretary of P. G. A.; Meeting Ends Today

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 13.—The National Professional Golfers' Association today unanimously reelected Tom Walsh, of Chicago, president for another year.

Frank Sprogell, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was named secretary, replacing Charles R. Clark, Willoughby, Ohio. The vote was 35 to 34. Willie Maguire, of Houston, Tex., was reelected treasurer, defeating Joel Smith, of Hartford, Conn., 47 to 18.

Walsh said that the contract of Fred Corcoran, of Boston, as tournament bureau manager, had been continued through 1941. Corcoran, who arranged a 1939 tournament program in which the stars played for $160,000 and attracted some 500,000 spectators, has lined up another attractive winter program.

Walsh said it was likely that several recommendations now before the convention would be approved at tomorrow's final session. The most important, one introduced by Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, chairman of the tournament committee, would authorize a national tournament in which club professionals would pair with a femine star from his club in a tourney bringing together pro and woman combinations from all parts of the Nation.

'It's O. K. Mates,' Keep Fishing—Off That Bridge

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Nov. 13.—Bridge fishermen may keep on fishing off of highway bridges so long as they do not constitute a traffic obstruction, according to a Richmond attorney's interpretation of an opinion from the Attorney General.

In spite of the adverse ruling by the State Highway Commission, the law today is exactly what it has been for a number of years, said William C. Parkinson, who is representing a group of the bridge fishermen.

He cited an opinion of Attorney General Staples to the Commonwealth's attorney of King William County, to support the view that any case of fishing from a highway bridge would have to be considered upon its individual merits—whether the fisherman was guilty of obstructing traffic.

strains of that apologetic classic, "Can't we talk it over?" from the picture "Peck's Bad Boys."

Alice Marble ought to make out very nicely with her pro tour. For all of her fame, the hinterlands have seen very little of her. Most of the cities to be visited have grown tired of the Vines, Stoffens, Barnes, etc. But Alice is a fresh face, with a stirring new type of game, for a girl. Her opponent, Mary Hardwick, will be brand new. Don Budge is always good to watch and Tilden will be drawing tennis fans until he's 60.

Alice is in for a piece of the gate receipts, over and above her $25,000 guarantee. The four and one-half-month season might possibly bring her $50,000, which is important sugar for a girl who had so little, when she started out in tennis, that she had to cut the backs out of her tennis shoes and stitch them with rubber bands, to make them fit her ample puppies.

Alice's pro tour represents a nice break, too, for Eleanor Tennant, the best women's tennis teacher in the business. Miss Tennant is Alice's manager and gets 10 per cent of her earnings. When Alice broke down six years ago, and was out of the game for about two years with sunstroke, anemia and pleurisy, Miss Tennant quietly picked up the doctors' bills and living expenses, which ran to several thousand dollars. Not only that, but she spends more than half the money she earns as a teacher on promising players, sending them to tournaments for experience, buying them equipment, etc.

That thing called amateur hockey comes in for a lambasting from the A. A. U. in the current issue of the amateur house organ. Seems that Canadian authorities recently decided that unmarried hockey players appearing in the United States will be permitted to spend only $25 a week of their salaries here and married men $50 a week—the remainders of their salaries to be deposited in Canadian banks.

"Similar arrangements will be made in the case of amateurs who earn salaries in United States dollars . . ." the edict ruled.

Nebraska, Alabama Are Likely Orange Bowl Opponents

Georgetown, Eagles Still In Running

Nine Teams Stand Chance of Miami Invitation; Vols, Rams Mentioned

By H. J. Aronstam

United Press Staff Correspondent.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 13.—Nine teams were tabbed tonight as good Orange Bowl prospects, but, barring last-minute tricks of football's fickle fortunes, Nebraska and Alabama appeared to be the best bets for the citrus belt's New Year's Day grid dish.

The other possibilities were Boston College, Fordham and Georgetown from the North, and Tennessee, Texas A. & M., Mississippi and Mississippi State from the South.

Nebraska and Alabama were favored by the process of elimination, not taking into account the possibility that Mississippi State or Georgia Tech might knock the 'Bamans off between now and the end of the current campaign.

Likely Third Choice

The speculation on the Orange Bowl contestants took into consideration that the more lucrative Rose and Sugar Bowls would get the four most desirable teams available for a post-season classic.

Here is how the so-called experts figured it:

If unbeaten Boston College gets by undefeated Georgetown Saturday, Boston probably will be a likely candidate for the Sugar Bowl and at the same time eliminate Georgetown. As for Fordham, the Rams have been wooed before by the Orange Bowl—but never won for the Miami game.

There was a long, slim chance that the Orange Bowl might get either the Texas Aggies or Tennessee, both of whom were unbeaten, but only if both were overlooked by the Rose Bowl. In that unexpected event, one would go to the Sugal Bowl and the other would come here.

Ole Miss and Mississippi State play each other, thus lessening their chances.

Both Teams Beaten

Nebraska and Alabama both have been beaten. The Conrhuskers bowed to the powerhouse Minnesota eleven, 13-7, in the opening game of the season and Alabama dropped a 27-12 decision to Tennessee.

Nebraska, which still has Pitt, Iowa State and Kansas State to meet before claiming the Big Six Conference title, has rolled up 120 points and had 35 tallied against them in beating Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Iowa.

Alabama has beaten Spring Hill, Mercer, Howard, Kentucky and Tulane and scored 127 points to 33 for their opponents. Their schedule however, still calls for contests with Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt and Mississippi State.

Even precedent favors a Nebraska-Alabama meeting in the Orange Bowl, for Big Six and Southeastern Conference schools have been the New Year's foes here for the past two years.

Andrew Ponzi, defending champion; Erwin Rudolph and Willie Mosconi will represent New York billiard academies. Other competitors and cities they'll represent are: Jimmy Caras, Philadelphia; George Kelly, Newark; Joe Procita, Boston; Irving Crane, Syracuse, and Onofrio Lauri, Scranton, Pa.

Ice Hockey Eagles Sport New Feathers

Norm Burns, speedy skating center of the Atlantic City and River Vale ice hockey teams last season, strikes a pose in the new red, white and blue uniform of S. G. Leoffler's Eagles, who have obtained his services for 1940-41. Burns is one of the eight new men signed to replace missing men from last year's second-place Eagles

W. & L. Back Gives Out With Year's Best Hardluck Story—Police Throw Him Out

Dick Pinck Sleeps As Mates Play W. Va.; Crashes Gate Too Late

By Bill Boni,

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Nov. 13.—"Serewy News of the Gridiron," No. 4, Vol. II (and opening promptly with the best hard-luck story of the year):

Seems Dick Pinck, star halfback at Washington and Lee, had such pain from an abscessed tooth he didn't sleep a wink for two nights before the game with West Virginia. Saturday morning, the trainer gave him some mild "dope" to ease the agony and Pinck, dazed from that and the lack of sleep, stumbled into the wrong hotel room, where he promptly fell asleep.

Follows an interval of several hours, during which the team departs for the stadium after assistant managers have been sent on numerous but fruitless searches for the missing halfback, and we return to find our hero awake and wandering into the deserted lobby, to hear W. and L. is leading, 7-6, late in the first half.

Young Pinck dashed out the door and into a taxi and, fully awake by now, rushed up to the main gate at the stadium. But he didn't have a ticket. Ergo, the gatekeepers wouldn't let him in.

Pinck knocked 'em down and crashed the gate, only to run full-tilt into two State troopers who promptly tossed him out again.

Desperate, young Pinck ran all the way around to the other side of the park, crashed that gate without leaving time for questions, locked himself into the field house while he put on his uniform—and, after convincing the coach his alibi was genuine, got away for several good gains in the last quarter, but too late to bring W. and L. back from a 12-7 defeat.

Guaranteed by Lea Booth, W. and L. News Bureau.

When Gonzaga played Willamette at Longview, Wash., it was so foggy the officials had to tie flashlights to the yardline stakes so the boys could see how far they had to go for a first down, and the punters couldn't see the safety men while the safety men had to play the punts by ear.

From Gail Fowler, (AP), Seattle.

They introduced Ken Fairman, Princeton's graduate manager of athletics, as an all-America end the other day. Which brought this comeback from Fairman:

"That's very nice, but I can't forget my sophomore year, when we took a 51-14 shellacking from Yale and I stopped off at the Princeton Club in New York on the way back. I wanted to make a phone call, but found all I had in my pocket was my ticket to Princeton.

"I went over to a stout, red-faced party and said:

"'Look, could you let me have a nickel? I want to call a friend.'

"'You're Fairman, aren't you?' said he. I said I was, so he dug down in his pocket and said:

Out in the North Central Conference they think pretty highly of a University of South Dakota quarterback named Bobby Burns. To illustrate his coolness under fire, the Iowa game is given as the favorite example.

South Dakota had the ball on about its 30 late in the first half and Burns, figuring to kill as much time as possible, ran three successive plays into the line. But there still was time left, and he was stumped whether to risk a kick or losing the ball on downs in his own territory. So brash Bobby walked up to the scrimmage line, looked at the Iowa signal-caller and cracked:

"Say, Couppee, you're a Big Ten quarterback—what would you do in a spot like this?"

From Dan Desmond, Sioux City (Iowa) Journal.

8 New Players Make Debut With Eagles

Washington Hockey Team Opens Season Tomorrow in Boston

Eight new players are to make their debut with the Washington Eagles when they open their Eastern Amateur Hockey League season with a two-night series against the Boston Olympics in the spacious Boston Garden tomorrow and Saturday nights.

Players signed to replace stars who failed to return from last year's second place Washington sextet are Nor mBurns, Russ Rossignol and Roy McBride, centers; Gordon Hemming, goal; Jimmy McCurry, defense, and Frank Mailley, Jack MacBeth and Gordon Pranschke, wings.

Probably the oustanding newcomer to the Eagles is Norm Burns, high-scoring center of the Atlantic City and River Vale clubs last season, who had been sought by Coach Redvers Mackenzie the past two seasons. Burns is a polished skater and splendid shot and should prove invaluable to Washington.

Players from last season who have not returned are Les Ramsay, Ken Partis and Roy Covert, centers; Gordon Lee, goal; Bill Davies, defense, and Alan Kuntz, Bill Cairns and Bill Lahti, wings.

Ross Knipfel, 195-pound blond youngster, replaces Davies as a teammate for the popular and talented Len Burrage on defense.

Many Washingtonians attending Saturday afternoon's football game involving Georgetown University and Boston College at Fenway Park are expected to be present for both hockey matches. Sell-out crowds ranging from 15,000 to 18,000 are predicted for the Boston Garden both nights.

Washington and Lee Shows Zip In Drills for Sewanee Game

Squad Determined to Win Saturday; News From Southern Football Camps

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Nov. 13.—In spite of recent reversals and a host of injuries to the regulars the Washington and Lee squad showed zip in defensive scrimmage today against the freshman running Sewanee plays.

Steve Hanasik, senior guard who has been acting captain since the loss by injury of Jack Mangan, summed up the outlook of the battered Generals by saying:

"We haven't given up just because we've lost several games. We all know we can still win a couple more and we plan to start at Chattanooga Saturday."

Indians Kept Indoors

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—A heavy rain kept the William and Mary football squad indoors today for blackboard drills as Coach Carl Voyles began mapping his campaign to make Thanksgiving a day for the Indians at Richmond.

William and Mary needs only a tie with the Spiders to win the State crown, while the Richmonders need a victory to take the honors

Spiders View Mistakes

Richmond, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—Richmond's Spiders were flooded off Millhiser Feld today and spent the afternoon reviewing their mistakes in the North Carolina contest as revealed in motion pictures of the game.

Tackling and blocking faults were pointed out by Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite who emphasized fundamentals in starting the Spiders on their practice route for the State championship clash with Williams and Mary here Thanksgiving Day.

Cavaliers Drill for Vols

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—Tennessee's bewildering shifts were introduced to the Virginia Cavalier football squad today as the team intensified its preparation for Saturday's game at Knoxville.

Head Coach Frank Murray divided the squad into two units for light offensive and defensive scrimmage with the defensive assignments being stressed for the regulars in the Virginia line. Bill Dudley, fleet Cavalier back, did most of the kicking and passing.

Backs Show More Drive

Lexington, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—Coach Pooley Hubert said after putting his V. M. I. squad through its practice paces today that the backfield men were showing more drive than they have exhibited in practice during the last few weeks.

The Cadet Fighting Squadron was hitting hard and fast in a 20-minute scrimmage session against the third-stringers on a muddy field. The only regular missing from practice for the Maryland game at Lynchburg was Randy Huyett, end, who had a tooth pulled today.

The former, Postmaster General will stay overnight with Frank Phillips, Bartlesville, Okla., oil man. At dinner in Phillips' Woolaroc Lodge tonight will be Lew Wentz, Ponca City, Okla., oil man and a long time baseball enthusiast.

"All I'm saying," grinned Farley, "is what I have said several times in the past: I have every confidence that the deal for purchase of the New York Yankees will be consummated in a reasonable time."

Dolly's Love Captures Manly Steeplechase Handicap

Penrod Rides Victor; Pays $3.60 Mutuel

Oneechee Finishes Second, Red Rain Is Third; Ossabaw Loses Rider

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 13.—Repeating his victorious performance in the Battleship Handicap of a week ago, E. B. Schley's Dolly's Love accounted for the Manly Steeplechase Handicap here this afternoon before 7,500 rainsoaked and chilled patrons of the sport.

Ridden by Jimmy Penrod, the 6-year-old gelding led all the way for 2½ miles over the muddy and treacherous course, but had to be hard driven in the final half-mile to turn back Thomas Hitchcock's Oneechee by a length. Far back of this pair came Gwladys Whitney's Red Rain to takethird money.

Only five started in the Manly and one of these, Louis B. Meyer's Ossabaw, lost his rider, T. Roby, at the sixteenth jump. Good Chance completed the field. Roby suffered a broken collarbone.

The victory for Dolly's Love was his third in nine starts this season, all three being in stake events. Today's triumph was worth $4,410 to Owner Schley, who lives at Far Hills, N. J., in the center of the fox-hunting section.

Victor Pays $3.60

Dolly'se Love was coupled with Ossabaw as the Trainer O. T. Dubassoff entry, and the pair was favored in the wagering, the winner paying $3.60 for $2 in the mutuels. The time was 5:15 2/5, the slowest in 20 runnings of the stake.

Penrod rode confidently on Dolly's Love, just as he did in the Battleship. The Schley representative handled his assignment of 148 pounds well, and during the first two miles of the stake Dolly's Love and Ossabaw were running one-two as the others trailed from six to a dozen lengths back of them.

When Ossabaw unseated Roby, Oneechee moved up to challenge Dolly's Love and it appeared for a brief interval that the Hitchcock colors were going to prevail, but Penrod had something left in the drive from the final jump to the wire and managed to earn the stake by a length.

The program was marked by a nasty spill in the first race, when Arthur Craig's mount, Riding Light, stumbled soon after the start and went down. Equivocal stumbled over the fallen horse and kicked Craig, also unseating R. Howell.

Craig Rushed to Hospital

Craig was rushed to Bon Secours Hospital with what was feared to be a fractured skull but later reports stated he had suffered only severe lacerations about the head.

The day's opener, which was marred by the spill, went to Brandon Stable's Largo Mint under a strong ride by Johnny Gilbert. This 6 to 1 shot, showing plenty of early speed, was trying hard to toss it off in the stretch but Gilbert kept him going long enough to take a length victory over Walter M. Jefford's Warlock, stablemate of the fallen Riding Light. J. V. Stewart's Machree was a steady-running third. The electric timer recorded 1:18 2-5 wich was tip off enough as to the condition of the racing strip.

J. Hal, from the stable of Mrs. O. L. Steele, found the going to his liking in the mile and an eighth second race, the son of Mate leading from end to end at the liberal price of $35 for $2. Johnny Harrell rode the winner which finished a length before Blacky Bee. Anglo Saxon, after taking several members of the field wide on both turns, was a distant third.

The victory for J. Hal completed a daily double payoff of $356.60 for $2 to the 36 holders of the right tickets.

Coming from behind with a tremendous stretch rush, Woodvale Farm's Dorimer, under Apprentice C. McCreary, got up to take the third, at a mile and a furlong, by two lengths from Brooke Johns' Abbasside. Topee, rank outsider in the field of six, was third.

WAR LOCK, off in tangle, moved up boldly to menace leader, but faltered in stretch drive. MACHREE was unable to assume lead and ran an even race. WIRE ME moved into contention after a quarter, but was not good enough. RIDING LIGHT fell and EQUIOVAL lost rider when caught in a jam soon after the break.

SECOND RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 1:49. Off 1:50½. Winner, Mrs. O. L. J. HAL jumped to lead soon after start, opened commanding lead, but was forced to a hard drive to stave off bid of BLACKY BEE. The latter suffered interference at first turn, was weakly ridden and closed well on own courage. ANGLO SAXON chased winner throughout and tired. DIZZY B. made move while racing on outside, but was not good enough. CANAPE was in thick of contention for three-quarters and tired.

DORIMAR, under a snug hold while racing on inside, saved ground entering stretch, came around leader soon after leaving eighth pole and was going away under intermittent punishment. ABBASSIDE was first to show at the break, set pace while running easily and held on gamely when placed to a drive, but was no match for winner. TOPEE raced on the inside from start and closed willingly. CHERRY TRIFLE moved up leaving backstretch, but flattened out when real test came.

SMART CRACK was in close quarters in early stages, came between horses to take command, but was hard ridden to outgame LAST CALL. The latter also suffered early interference, moved up with ultimate winner and just missed. ROYAL BUSINESS lacked early speed, but closed with good courage when able to get clear sailing. WINNING CHANCE ran an even race. PORT WALES had early speed.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOLLY'S LOVE (entry), $3.60, $2.20, out; ONEECHEE, $3.50, out; RED RAIN, out.

DOLLY'S LOVE, setting own pace, opened comfortable lead while under a strong hold, made a bad landing at the fifteenth fence, recovered well and lasted under a strong drive. ONEECHEE, faultlessly ridden from start, followed pace while well in hand, went to leader after final fence, but was not good enough. RED RAIN was a trailer and caught only a tired horse in closing stages. GOOD CHANCE was within striking distance until he made a bad landing at seventeenth fence and from there to the wire he was not hard pushed. OSSABAW was closest to pace of stablemate, fenced well to sixteenth, where he made a bad landing and unseated rider.

At The Post

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Alfred G. Vanderbilt, president of the Maryland Jockey Club, announced this morning that he had taken over the contract of the promising apprentice Darrell Madden. The young rider, appears to have the quality of a top notch booter. He can do 95 pounds. Trainer Bill Finnegan, trainer of the Circle M horses, has announced that he will ship his charges to Florida at the conclusion of the session. Jockey Mannie Berg, who has been in a slump for the past eight or ten days, appears to have regained his best form again. Berg scored a double here Tuesday when he was aboard Star Charter and Sunphantom in the first and last race respectively. Jockey Johnny Gilbert stated that he will do the riding for the stable of Cleveland Putman during the Florida season. The Putman charges are in the hands of the capable William Winfrey. Apprentice Willie Canning has been engaged to ride R. Sterling Clark's Abbe Pierre in the Bowie Handicap Friday. Trainer J. P. (Doc) Jones announced that Crispin Oglebay's good 2-year-old colt Ocean Blue would be handled by Don Meade in the Walden. Mrs. T. Christopher's Doubt Not, winner of the 6-furlong Ritchie, will not make his next start until the Hialeah Inaugural, according to present plans. He will later be pointed for the Widener, to be run at the same course. The safest wager around the track today was that the racing strip would not be fast for the remainder of the meeting. This year's crop of apprentice riders is the best seen here in many a year. Among the top flight "bug" riders plying their trade here is W. Canning, C. McCreary, D. Madden, J. Harrell and E. Kaufman. Carroll Bierman, leading rider at the recent Laurel meeting, seems to hold a comfortable lead over his rivals at the present meet. For the first ten days Bierman had eight winners while his closest rivals had but five. Bobby Merritt and Willie Garner were in the runnerup position. Trainer Selby Burch shipped his charges to Bowie. Included in the shipment were Grey Wolf and Off Shore, the latter a winner here. Clocker Mike was in good spirits today. He told Art Brown to bet on the double he picked in the paper. When the second race was over, Mike was looking for Art. As usual, Mr. Brown was "looking out the window." See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Docket showed good speed behind Becomly and John's Star in his last and at Laurel raced within a length of Migration over a heavy track. Silver Voice went well in his first start since last spring and may be ready to spring a surprise. Rich Cargo has been outclassed in late races but figures to be close with these platers.

Second race—Impshi made one start last year being heavily supported in a classy field of maiden juveniles. After leading most of the way, he was finally caught by Scurry to finish second, beaten two lengths. Storminess had speed in his last but stopped. Having shown a preference for off tracks, he might stick it out. Minee Mo is a money possibility.

Third race—Fatty, though beaten in his last race, whipped most of the contenders in this heat in a previous race. He needs only to repeat that effort to score here. Dundrillin won his last and could make trouble. Santi Quaranti was a beaten favorite behind Fatty recently.

Fourth race—Flying Duke moves down in class to meet this field and his consistent efforts with platers of the $2,500 variety indicate that he is at his best. Ginobi has run several good races in the mud and has the speed to be dangerous. Better Half turned in a surprise performance to run a good second in her last and is one of the contenders.

Fifth race—Young County won his last heat at the United Hunts, running a mile and a sixteenth over the Belmont track in 1:46 3-5. His creditable mud form marks him as one of the keen contestants. Indomitable had no excuse last out when fourth in similar company at Empire City. Lady Infinite is capable of bettering a poor recent showing.

Sixth race—Whirlaway looked like a sure winner in the Futurity last week before he bolted to the outside fence. He is at home on an off track and should win if he steers a straight course. Ocean Blue would be a hard horse to beat if he can run back to winning effort of last week. Stimady beat top notchers in a stake at Empire and gets the call over the others.

Seventh race—Dorothy Pomp has been holding her own in late races against better grade platers. The sloppy going will greatly increase her chances of victory. Lonely Road raced well in New York and his last Pimlico race was commendable. Sir Reg appears capable of holding the others safe.

Eighth race—Winter Money won over a sloppy track in New York last month and in one start since then finished close up behind Chronology. Bull Terrier was second in his recent Keeneland race indicating that he still retains his edge. Stable is capable of bettering his last race.

Eastman Cuts $2,625,000 Wage Melon

By the Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Directors of Eastman Kodak Co. today declared a wage dividend of approximately $2,625,000 for employes, to be paid March 24 next.

Basis for the wage dividend was the voting of a quarterly dividend on common stock of $1.50 a share, bringing the year's declarations to $6, and of the regular 1½ per cent dividend on the preferred stock, also amounting to $1.50 a share. These are payable January 2 to stockholders of record December 5.

Those eligible for the wage dividend, are regular Kodak employes who are at work next March 24, and who have worked all or part of 26 different weeks in 1940. The number participating is not yet known, but last year payment was made to 30,934 employes throughout the world, including 25,508 in the United States and Canada.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Lacking the broader speculative activity which contributed to last week's post-election bull market in wheat, the grain trade today was forced to depend on scattered professional and commercial dealings for determination of prices.

As a result, price movements were irregular. Wheat continued to retreat under weight of profit-taking, basking down ¼ to ¾ cent during the first hour. Later prices rallied and then pushed up to net gains in the final hour on buying attributed to mills and scattered short covering.

Closing figures were at the best of the session, unchanged to ⅞ higher, compared with yesterday, December 87¾@88, May 87¼@87⅝. Corn, which had lost ⅛ to ¾ cent closed ⅛ to ⅝ net higher. December (2)⅞@⅞, May 64¼; oats ¾ to ⅞ up; soybeans 1¼ to 1⅝ lower; rye unchanged to ⅛ higher and lard 5 to 142 higher.

Renewed Strength in Preferred Stocks Bolsters General List; Steels Retreat

New York, Nov. 13.—Steels and a number of other recent industrial leaders again were under pressure in today's stock market but a wide assortment of specialties displayed renewed strength. Senior stocks pushed up in the final hour and forenoon losses of fraction to more than 2 points were reduced at the close.

Dealings, lively at the start, dwindled on the recovery move.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .3 of a point at 46.1. While the composite had erased a portion of its advance of the past week or so, it was not overlooked that a month ago it stood at 44.5. Transfers totalled 1,068,250 shares against 1,446,971 the day before.

Continued optimism for business, and the belief divided accumulations on several preference stocks would be paid off if the industrial upswing proceeded, proved a bolstering influence. Many traders, at the same time, inclined to stand aside pending outcome of the Hitler-Molotoff conferences at Berlin which, some suggested, might lead to a new "peace offensive" and prove unsettling marketwise.

A favorable survey by Iron Age failed to prop steels, as did the announcement of the United States Steel Corporation of plans to increase ingot capacity of its Southern subsidiaries. Rails just about held their own as carrier executives forecast rising traffic over the next six months. Motors were unresponsive to reports of sustained demand in this field. Coppers were relatively narrow in the wake of estimates. Deliveries of the red metal in October hit a record peak.

Principal share losers included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Montgomery-Ward, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, Western Union, American Smelting and International Harvester.

On the other hand, General Steel Castings preferred shot up 6 points and gains of 1 to 4 were posted for American Woolen preferred, Armour preferred, International Paper common and preferred, Budd Mfg. preferred, Climax Molybdenum and Hiram Walker.

Modest improvement was retained by Wilson & Co., Armour common, Evans Products, Goodrich, United Aircraft, Pan American Airways, Phelps Dodge, American Can and Pennsylvania Railroad. Pennsylvania declared a dividend of $1 on the common versus 50 cents paid previously.

On the offside in the Curb were Aluminum of America, Bell Aircraft, Bath Iron Works, Jones & Laughlin and New Jersey Zinc. Plus signs were shown for Brewster Aero, Gulf Oil and Pennsylvania-Central Airlines.

The bond market worked out an irregular price pattern with profit taking in recently strong issues mostly offset by fresh buying in other groups.

United States Governments were lower from the start and showed little comeback during the session. Declines ranged to 15/32 of a point. Trading in the group was light.

Western Union 4½s and 5s were strong. The former moved up 3½ points to 76½ and the latter 1⅜ to 77½. Directors of the company late yesterday declared a dividend of $1 a common share, the first since 1937, and reported sharply increased earnings for the first nine months of this year.

Losers of 1 to around 5 points in the foreign list included Denmark 5½s, Belgium 6½s, Buenos Aires 4¾s and Norway 4s.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Southern hedging sales smothered rising tendencies in cotton futures today but the market held steady and closed 1 point higher to 1 lower.

Offsetting the selling were trade price fixing and purchases of sizable quantities by Southeastern mill interests. A high point in the trade was purchase of 10,000 bales of March, said to be for the account of a large Carolina mill and believed to represent lifting of previous hedges.

Specialty fabrics took the play in the Worth Street textile market. Limited trade was done on staple fabrics at steady prices.

Defense Declared Slowed by States Trade Barriers

Los Angeles, Nov. 13 (AP).—The American Trucking Association's convention was told last night that interstate trade barriers "have caused a slowing down of defense preparations at several points."

"Army authorities are known to be concerned about these hindrances to the free flow of goods between States because of conflicting State regulations, duties, differing classifications," said Morris H. Glazer, of Washington, editor of the association's official publication, Transport Topics.

He cited as an example the difference in truck payload regulations, which he said range from a maximum limit of 18,000 pounds gross in Kentucky to 68,000 in California and 102,000 in Rhode Island.

Ted V. Rogers, of Scranton, Pa., president of the association, reported the $3,000,000,000 truck industry paid $430,826,000 in license, gasoline and other special taxes last year.

Defense Needs Seen Boosting Oil Demand

Record Domestic Use To Offset Export Loss, Institute Is Told

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Dr. Robert E. Wilson of the National Defense Commission predicted today that increased petroleum buying for defense and other purposes would offset the loss of European oil markets by next spring and then raise demand to a record level.

In an address prepared for the American Petroleum Institute, Dr. Wilson said that, if land defense of the United States ever became necessary, the Nation's widespread oil industry and highway system would provide "a flexible defense system better than several Maginot Lines."

To date, he continued, total petroleum purchases resulting from the national defense effort had been negligible—"much less than enough to offset the loss of our exports to the continent of Europe."

"However, this demand is on its way," he said. "Not only will the Army and Navy have steadily increasing demands for almost every petroleum product, but there will also be additional industrial demands and demands for men who will have employment for the first time in many years. I estimate that by this coming spring these increasing demands will, on the whole, offset our loss of exports, and thereafter will increase steadily to a figure substantially beyond any total requirements the industry has yet seen."

It would be possible by "rather moderate methods of reducing civilian consumption" to meet all military demands without any increase in refinery capacity, the Defense Commisison official said, "so that there seems to be no justification for asking the Government to finance new refining capacity, as many seem to anticipate."

Visible Grain Supply

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Visible supply of American grain showed the following changes from a week ago (in bushels): Wheat decreased 1,335,000; corn increased 1,532,000; oats decreased 145,000; rye decreased 242,000; barley decreased 243,000.

Frigid Blast Kills Turkeys; Wholesale Prices Advance

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Dressed turkey prices in the big Chicago wholesale market rose ½ to 1 cent a pound today after gains of about ½ cent yesterday as the poultry market reflected the wave of wintry weather in important producing areas.

Reports from widely scattered adeas west and northwest of Chicago told of material losses of turkeys as a result of the sudden cold. Poultry dealers said that so far the most serious effect the weather has had on the pre-Thanksgiving turkey market was to delay shipments. They said it was too early to determine the exact extent of damage or how much the turkey market would be affected.

Birds packed in boxes sold up to 25½ cents a pound for 8 to 12 pound weights in the wholesale market.

There were various unconfirmed reports as to the extent of losses, one wholesaler estimating up to 2,000,000 birds had been killed. However, the 1940 crop, estimated about 1 per cent larger than last year, is the biggest on record while there was also a record breaking storage supply. The Government estimated the crop at about 33,139,000 birds.

In some sections where snow and cold were most severe farm losses reached 100 per cent, reports indicated.

Bears Toss Away Crutches for 'Skins

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—The Chicago Bears have discarded their crutches for the important game with the Washington Redskins Sunday.

Coach George Halas said that the Bears, Western Division leaders, would be at peak strength for the first time in a month for the clash with the Redskins, eastern pacesetter.

George Musso, Giant guard, and Fullback Joe Osmanski, the National League's leading ground gainer in 1939, are ready for heavy duty after nursing injuries for three weeks. Joe Stydahar, all-league tackle, and Gary Famiglietti, fullback, were hurt in last Sunday's game with Detroit, but their injuries are of a minor nature.

Both Washington and the Bears were defeated last week, snapping winning streaks of seven and five games, respectively.

The Post Radio Time Table

12:30 p. m., WMAL—"Flood Control Problems" are discussed by Josephine Hemphill and Morse Salisbury of the Department of Agriculture on the National Farm and Home Hour, which also pipes in for the Ogden, Utah, Livestock Show.

1:15, WMAL—The daily report luncheons of the Washington Community Chest will be aired at this time daily from the main ballroom of the Willard.

7:15, WJSV—Lowell Thomas, NBC's familiar voice, makes his second CBS airing in as many days, when he tells Lanny Ross the story behind his favorite melody, "Song of India," which conjures up recollections of Lawrence of Arabia.

8:30, WJSV—Laborer William Martin served 14 years on false charges of murder. After his release from prison, he actually committed the crime for which he had been sentenced. British law provides that a man cannot be punished twice for the same offense. What happened? Strange as It Seems!

9, WRC—Bing Crosby's return to that music hall calls for an all-star galaxy: Joel McCrea in a scene from "Foreign Correspondent;" Connie Boswell, William Frawley and Wingy Manone.

9:35, WMAL—"Is This Our War?" is the first program of the season for America's Town Meeting of the Air. Col. Henry Breckenridge, of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, and Anne O'Hare McCormick, of the New York Times, uphold the affirmative against Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, of the Committee to Defend America First, and Mary W. Hillyer, secretary of the Joint Committee for Political Refugees. George V. Denny, jr., is again moderator.

10, WRC—Volatile John Barrymore presents his version of "Rudy's Day in Hollywood" with R. Vallee and M. Rosenbloom assisting.

10:20, WJSV—Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the First Army, Second Corps Area, addresses New York's Lotus Club at a dinner in his honor.

10:45 WMAL—Pearl Buck, Luise Rainer and either Mme. Chiang Kai-shek or Dr. Lin Yutang, depending upon short-wave conditions, speak for the China Emergency Relief Committee. This is a recorded broadcast of an earlier airing.

10:45, WOL—Dr. Frederick Stock conducts the Chicago Symphony Orchestra: Carnival Romain, Berlioz and Thus Spake Zarathustra, Strauss.

Albert Warner, CBS's news commentator in Washington, has been chosen by Sigma Delta Chi, the national journalistic fraternity, as the recipient of its first annual award for the best radio news writing. The presentation is to be made Saturday at the fraternity's annual convention in Des Moines.
The award was one of five made by a committee of five distinguished newspaperman judges for general reporting, editorial writing, foreign correspondence and radio news-writing, the latter being a new category this year.
Those judges were Roy Roberts, the managing editor of the Kansas City Star; John W. Owens, editor-in-chief of the Baltimore Sun; Paul Scott Mowrer, editor-in-chief of the Chicago Daily News; Arthur Krock, Washington Bureau chief for the New York Times, and Frederic William Wile, of the Washington Star.
The award was determined on the basis of five scripts on national affairs which Al prepared for his regular daily broadcasts over the Columbia network from its Washington station WJSV.
Warner stepped into his present radio post in April of 1939 after having been chief of the New York Herald-Tribune's Washington bureau for several years. He is a former president of the White House Correspondents' Association and now is executive committee chairman of the Radio Correspondents' Association of Washington.

British Take, Lose, Recapture Gallabat

Anglo-Egyptian Post Changes Hands 3 Times in 4 Days

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 13.—British Indian and white troops captured, lost and recaptured Gallabat, in the Anglo-Egyptian-Sudan, near the Ethiopian border, in a four-day action which involved five battalions of Italian and Askari (native) troops, military circles reported today.

(British and Italian sources repeatedly have contradicted each other's claims to possession of Gallabat in the past few days.)

British artillery was reported by these military sources to be shelling now the Italian fortified camp at Mettemma, near Gallabat, and they said shell dumps and gasoline depots there were in flames. Their force is cooperating with the British troops, it was learned.

The Italians "suffered heavily" in the fighting, the sources said.

Forward point of one of several Italian thrusts at Egypt, Gallabat was first taken from the British last summer. It was described here as strategically important as a "jumping-off place" for Italian attacks on the Sudan. Protected by a small fort, it is the junction of many caravan routes.

Italians Suffer Heavily

The British were understood to have attacked Gallabat first in the early hours of November 6, and evicted an Italian battalion in an action lasting an hour and a quarter.

The Italian commander rushed up two supporting battalions from Mettemma. Counter attacking, the Italians were repulsed, military authorities said, with a British loss of 27 officers and men.

The Italians, these sources declared, "suffered considerably" and "a number of prisoners were taken."

That day and the next, Italian bombers pounded at the town and the British withdrew from their newly won position, first destroying three damaged tanks and the Italian gasoline dump.

The Italians re-entered Gallabat November 8, taking up their positions among the smoking ruins. Reinforced by two additional battalions, they faced the British position just east of the village.

Advancing again on the morning of November 10, the British swept aside Italian pickets by dawn, military men here said, and breakfasted in the recaptured fort after a swift attack which encountered "surprisingly light Italian resistance."

Baharder Wharves Fired

Cairo, Nov. 13 (INS).—Royal Air Force bombers, according to a communique issued today by the Cairo headquarters of the British Middle East command, attacked the Italian East African port of Baharder, in which two huge fires were started at the wharves and were seen to be burning an hour later.

A big Italian flying boat was caught and machine gunned from the air over the harbor of Zula until its riddled frame sank beneath the waters, the communique said.

An Italian ship at Harmilisland was bombed and machine gunned and other objectives there were also attacked. Another R. A. F. raid struck the Azoza Fascist airdrome, where "all bombs landed within the target area," the communique claimed.

There'll Be No Glue Shortage, Anyway

Are you a glue hoarder? Have you spent sleepless nights wondering if America has a sufficient supply of glue?

Out of numerous Government reports showing a shortage of tin, rubber or other economic commodities, a ray of hope filtered yesterday when the United States Tariff Commission reported that, come what may, America would have her glue.

Although during the World War there was a shortage of glues, gelatines and related products, America now is the world's largest glue producer, its output in 1937 reaching 365,000,000 pounds.

Van D. Hughes, Police Hero, Dies of Wound

A military funeral with burial in Arlington National Cemetery will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow for Van Doran Hughes, 40, a retired detective sergeant, who died at his home yesterday, victim of a gunman's bullet.

HUGHES

Though Hughes was shot ten years ago, doctors said the bullet, which was resting against his spine, caused his death. He died while he slept at his home, 8404 Dale Drive, Silver Spring, Md.

Hughes was retired from the force in November, 1937. He fought the retirement for several years, but recurring paralysis and pain from the spinal injury finally forced him accede.

With less than 15 years' service, he had piled up a record of 26 commendations and was awarded a silver medal for valor by an Act of Congress.

Received Congressional Medal

In 1930 he was shot in the pelvis, left thigh and wrist by a colored man he was pursuing. One bullet lodged against his spine.

A year after he was wounded he received the Congressional medal for apprehending the man who shot him.

He was made a precinct detective June 16, 1930, and 21 days later was promoted to detective sergeant. He was assigned to the then new pickup squad and later was transferred to the robbery squad.

It was while working on the robbery detail that he aided in the apprehension of members of the Tri-State gang who robbed a bank messenger at Union Station.

Twice Hurt in Chases

Hughes fractured his left ankle chasing a colored man in January, 1936, and in August the same year broke his right leg under similar circumstances.

Sergt. Hughes leaves his wife, Mrs. Ethelye Hughes, and a daughter, Mary Ethelye, 18; two brothers, both attorneys, James K. and Denny; two sisters, Mrs. J. R. Montgomery, Steubenville, Ohio, and Mrs. Mary H. McCoy, of Washington, and his mother, Mrs. Annie Hughes.

Blood Test Proves Husband's Paternity in Case, Court Rules

Two Washington lawyers abruptly reversed their views yesterday on the production of blood group test evidence in the Beach divorce case in District Court.

Dr. Alexander S. Wiener, Brooklyn expert, reported to Justice Bolitha J. Laws that the blood tests showed "nothing incompatible" with James E. Beach, 22, being the father of his wife's baby, John Warren Beach, 14 months old.

Beach, a mechanic, of 905 F Street Northeast, countered his wife's non-support action in May, 1939, with the charge that not he but another man was the father of the baby she then expected. He asked for a divorce.

Beach's attorney, John Paul Jones, fought nearly a year to compel the mother and child to submit to blood group tests. Several months ago the United States Court of Apepals upheld the new technique, establishing a precedent here.

If a man's blood differs sufficiently from that of the child tested, the process is said to prove he could not have been the father. But the test is inconclusive if the man could have been the father.

For this reason, Jones said yesterday he would seek to exclude Dr. Wiener's report from the record of the case. "Unfortunately it does not establish anything and lacks probative value," Jones explained.

John T. Bonner, attorney for Mrs. Mary E. Beach, 711 C Street Northwest, who vigorously resisted the compulsory tests, said he would insist that Dr. Wiener's report be included in the evidence.

"The test shows that the baby has Group B blood," said Bonner. "Its father, the scientists assert, must have had either Group A or Group AB blood. Now those are very uncommon types; probably no more than 1,500 men in Washington have either of them. But Mr. Beach is one of those men; his blood is Group A. I think that makes the test very strong evidence that he is the baby's father."

Bonner said that now the blood tests are out of the way, he plans to ask the court immediately to order Beach to pay for the bay's support pending final decision of the case.

Life Begins at 35, Jobless Women Assured

Women over 35 are "a drug on the market—nobody loves 'em."

This is the belief of Mrs. William Shearon, an economic analyst with the Social Security Board and chairman of the Women's Occupational Council. But the belief can't be true, for Mrs. Shearon loves them.

For months she has devoted all her waking hours away from her job to organizing the occupational council, which is seeking to find jobs for 10,000 unemployed Washington women in that age group.

Tuesday night the council held its first meeting at George Washington University and laid plans for a city-wide job canvass. But Mrs. Shearon's plans are not restricted to Washington. Women's clubs in other cities have heard of the council, and she envisages a nation-wide effort to help the 1,500,000 job-hunting American women over 35.

"Women over 35," Mrs. Shearon explained yesterday, "cannot be placed easily by employment services, private or governmental. If you put their cards in the file, all they do is gather dust. Employers very rarely ask for women that old.

"You must either hunt scientifically for places into which they could fit, or create new jobs for them. And so far no private or Government agency has tried to do this."

Organizations which are working with the council, according to Mrs. Shearon, include the Y. W. C. A., the Women's Bar Association, the Women's National Press Club, the Business and Professional Women's Club, the American Home Economic Association, the League of Women Voters, the Council of Social Agencies and a score of others.

Mrs. Shearon said that the council's next move will be to sponsor a series of lectures on job hunting for the unemployed. Free rooms have been promised at downtown hotels. And experts will instruct the women how to pick their jobs and land them.

End of USHA Is Proposed To Realtors

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—Elimination of the United States Housing Authority and substitution of a new, remodeled agency to assist cities in reassembling land in blighted areas was advocated today in a resolution introduced at the convention of National Association of Real Estate Boards at Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

This land would be leased or sold on fair terms to private redevelopment companies for such use as is best adapted to communities needs. The resolution is subject to general action Friday.

Opposition to Government ownership of housing facilities except such as may be essential for enlisted personnel of Army and Navy, and tax exemption for housing facilities for any classes of citizens was urged in the resolution. It voiced the organization's belief that families unable to pay rent for decent living quarters should receive direct rent relief. Introduced by Arthur W. Binns, chairman, committee on housing and blighted areas, it declared that one of the major campaigns in cities today is against the blight of slums, which is due to new modes of transportation and past planning errors.

Charles F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator for the National Defense Advisory Commission, told the delegates that housing for the defense workers is essentially a job for private enterprise.

Good progress is being made in the program, he said.

"I sure set our house on its ear last month when I stood up without any help. Pop said, 'Have you ever seen such posture?' And mom said, 'she wasn't taking any chances with it.' It was Simplex Flexies Shoes for me. So, she rushed me down to The Hecht Co. And such goings-on. They made me stand up. They asked how much I weighed. They measured my foot. Then, when they finally got me fitted they took me over to that thing called the X-Ray machine and said, 'See, there's plenty of room for his toes.' As if I couldn't feel it myself! And just to prove how comfortable they were I took a few steps alone . . . and mom got so excited she almost fainted. So, you can bet your best pair of stork pants, I'll be living in Simplex Flexies Shoes from now on."
